BUSINESSES Brought to knees

SARWAR A CHOWDHURY and GAZI TOWHID AHMED

What is typically a bustling part of Dhaka city lay in a sorry state yesterday morning. As if an angry cyclone had hit the capital's commercial hub, leaving a mountain of collateral damage in its wake.

There was nary a roadside shop in sight in Motijheel and Paltan, a part of town which is always buzzing with makeshift stalls and hawkers.

In their place lay a mass of ashes and brickbats, accompanied by wrecked signboards, thanks to the reign of terror that Hefajat-e-Islam unleashed on Sunday night.

The cluster of corporate houses in the area was not spared, either -- the exterior of most of them were badly defaced.

A particularly unforgettable sight was that of a BRAC Bank ATM booth, which was mercilessly ravaged. Thankfully, the mob could not get access to the safe.

"Four other booths of the bank were vandalised, but not as badly as that one. They just had their exterior

A & O-LEVEL EXAMS FROM TODAY Hostile politics vex students

WASIM BIN HABIB

O- and A-level examinations begin today amid fears that candidates across the country will not be able to take part in all the exams owing to political protests such as hartals or blockades.

These exams are held around the world simultaneously. Some 13,000 Bangladeshi students will take the tests administered by the British Council. Of them, about 11,000 will participate in the examinations at eight centres in the capital.

Talking to The Daily Star, a number of candidates and their parents have expressed concern over the current political situation in Bangladesh. They fear the authorities will fail to hold the tests if political parties enforce consecutive hartals.

The BNP-led 18-party opposition yesterday called daylong hartals for May 8 and 9, protesting what it said was Sunday's genocide following a rally of Hefajat-e Islam.

Hefajat-e Islam, meanwhile, in a press release has asked its activists to remain on the streets until further orders. The Islamist group on Sunday laid siege to Dhaka at several points, demanding a blasphemy law. Following massive violence by its men, law enforcers drove them away in the early hours of yesterday.

This time the examinations will be held in two shifts -- AM session from 11:00am and PM session from 2:00pm.

The British Council has declared its policy to

WARTIME KILLINGS IN CTG Probe body finds Quasem involved

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Jamaat-e-Islami leader Mir Quasem Ali was involved in the killing of at least eight people in Chittagong in two separate incidents during the Liberation War, said the investigation agency, designated to probe war crimes.

As the commander of Chittagong Al-Badr, Quasem set up torture cells at three different places where intellectuals, freedom fighters and aides of freedom fighters were brutally tortured and later killed.

The investigation agency found these facts in its 34-month-long probe against the war crimes suspect, now detained in custody.

How could they do it?

Hawkers, people in Paltan area reel from Hefajat shock

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Hawkers and small entrepreneurs doing business for decades around the Baitul Mukarram Mosque and Paltan had never experienced what happened on May 05, 2013.

Coming back to their business stocks yesterday, all they found was ashes.

During the daylong clashes with law enforcers, Hefajat-e Islam activists burned down around three to four thousand floating shops in the area on Sunday.

Fifty-five-year-old Abdullah, who had been selling books on the footpath in front of Moni Singh-Farhad Smriti Trust Bhaban for 35 years, has witnessed many political commotions in his life.

"When we see trouble we just pack up our goods in polythene and leave it on one side of the footpath. No one has ever looted or set fire to our goods before. This has happened for the first time," he said.

"We had never imagined they would burn our goods," said Mohammad Sirajul Islam, 25, who sells files and

Workers await salary

BGMEA yet to prepare complete list of workers of Rana Plaza factories

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The apparel makers said they would not be able to pay wages to the workers at five garment factories housed in the collapsed Rana Plaza today due to incomplete workers list.

Bangladesh Garment Manufacturers and Exporters Association (BGMEA) said it would need three more days to complete the list. Earlier, they pledged to pay their dues within May 7, today.

The apparel apex body has so far completed list of workers of two garment factories out of five in the Rana Plaza.

The latest figures in the list put the number of workers at the two factories higher than what the BGMEA directory had earlier noted.

Now, BGMEA said a total of 1,543 employees were working in New Wave Style, while earlier it said the number was 1,073. And the number of workers in New Wave Bottoms is 598 as against 526 stated previously.
