Old Tales of New Market

What do you expect to take away from a shop that you visit on a regular basis? Some clothes if you are visiting a clothing store, gadgets if you are in an electronic shop or greeting cards from a novelty store. Shops only sell tangible objects that you have to pay hard earned money for. Dhaka's historic New Market, however, is much more than just a market for trade. It's a hub for nostalgia, a place to evoke special memories of bygone days.

Much Ado about Army

The way the AL-led government is moving towards the next parliamentary polls has raised some crucial questions: does the AL-led government sincerely want to keep the army away from political hullabaloo? Or does it want to keep the army away considering the situation that had prevailed in January 2007? Will the strategy work?

26-27 Endeavour

Standing on the Shoulders of Giants

Five final year mechanical engineering students at BUET (Bangladesh University of Engineering and Technology) have built a car that costs less than Tk 70,000.
