Zack Snyder

to direct Justice League

After weeks and months of rumours, The Wall Street Journal is reporting that Zack Snyder will be directing "Justice League" for Warner Bros.

The reports quotes Warner's president of worldwide production, Greg Silverman, as confirming Snyder's appointment, before explaining that, "it will be a further expansion of this universe... Batman vs. Superman will lead into Justice League."

According to The Hollywood Reporter, the two films will also shoot back-to-back, with a view to "Justice League" opening in cinemas in 2017.

Meanwhile, The Wall Street Journal's report also suggests that the studio is also turning over the idea of a potential Wonder Woman spin-off, depending on how Gal Gadot's performance is received. Directed by Snyder and co-starring Ben Affleck, Henry Cavill and Jesse Eisenberg, "Batman vs. Superman" is set for release in mid- 2016.

IT'S TRUE!

Etching is the process of using strong acid or mordant to cut into the unprotected parts of a metal surface to create a design in intaglio in the metal (the original process—in modern manufacturing other chemicals may be used on other types of material). As an intaglio method of printmaking, it is, along with engraving, the most important technique for old master prints, and remains in wide use today.

Gallery Kaya's "Water Rhymes-2"

FAYZA HAQ

Till the 7th of May, Gallery Kaya will present watercolour ecstasies of the finest of our painters.

There is, for instance, Hamiduzzaman Khan who has brought in endless creations in cobalt blue, aquamarine and traces of yellow and sap green, along with the magic of houses and barges. The royal-blue and black give the element of the gathering storm, lashes of white and pale yellow form fragments of the land, and multi-coloured symphony in red and green portray the growth of trees and houses on the beach.

Alokes Ghosh has played with crimson and blue to bring in the sails of boats. Even the sails of his boats appear to be made of water -- such is the touch of Alokes' brush. The background appears locked in black and gray. The water images in front are also drenched with water, in umber, red and grey. His other "Untitled" is also a crowd of men in a boat. There are about seven of them and minuscule in size. Bars of gray, sap green and black lines make the water in front. A flow of black water brings in the watery backdrop.

The women, partially clothed, remain Jamal Ahmed's forte. The limbs are delicate and in her bare body, the sari looks exotic, as she fixes a crimson flower to her hair. His "Untitled" carries two horses, one black and the other white -- as they speed on the turf.

Kazi Raqib has two untitled pieces, both being acrylic on paper. One bears two love birds, kissing and cuddling, against a backdrop of blue. The other is a face of a woman, with delicate painted lips. Her face is partly white and partly ink-blue.

Ranjit Das, in his watercolours, has painted many trees with greenish sky at the back and waters of a lake in front. His other creation is that of five temples, with a tea-stall at the side. Purple and dark blue bushes are seen in the foreground.

Shishir Bhattacharjee's piece has two boats on the river at the back, and has some wild shrubs with their aerial roots, growing on the bare sand, in front. His other creation has a vendor, following a dog. There are boats on the sea and a red and yellow sun-umbrella on the sand, in front.

Goutam Chakraborty, with his trunks of elephants and teeth, appear to create idylls out of the blue and gold mélange of the animal's trunk and teeth wrapped up with red and orange streaks and the gold and black of a leopard's back.

"Maheshkhali" and "Old Dhaka-2" by Kamaluddin are beautiful images in pearly white and black. One shows three boats being built, and the other is a narrow passage with rickshaws, a bullock cart and some people making their way on foot.

Shohag Parvez's "Hills of green" and "Boats of Bangladesh" are buoyant with their riot of colours. His "Hills of green" have trees and hills at the back which vary from dark blue to pale blue. That patches of green have scarlet flowers in them in front. His "Boats" has red, green and brown covers, where the boatmen keep their food and instruments to sail with. Orange, purple and green form the sail of the mighty boats, which have multiple decks and appear to be crammed with passengers.

Greek classical tragedies staged

Recreation of ancient times

PRANABESH CHAKRABORTY, Chittagong

The staging of the three Greek classical tragedies -- "Oedipus", "Oedipus at Colonus" and "Antigone" -- penned by famous ancient Greek tragedian Sophocles drew hundreds of theatre enthusiasts at Chittagong Shilpkala Academy premises on Friday evening.

Chittagong's high-flying theatre troupe Fame staged the four and a half hour "Greek trilogy" on the open stage of the Academy.

This was the second staging of the three tragedies, most commonly known as Theban plays by Fame. The troupe first staged the trilogy on the open stage of DC Hill premises in 2005.

Adapted by noted writers Syed Ali Ahsan and Shudhangshu Ranjan Ghosh, the three tragedies are sagas of the misfortune that dogs Oedipus, the king of Thebes, and his inheritors.

An oracle prophesied that Oedipus would be the cause of his father's death and become his mother's husband. The oracle's prediction came true though Oedipus remained in the dark about the prophecy.

Chittagong University Dramatics Department teacher Ashim Das, who is also the chief of Fame, designed and directed the plays.

Talking to The Daily Star, Das said only seven of over 100 plays of Sophocles survived the test of time. The three tragedies are widely popular as a trilogy though the plays were not written as a series.

"The staging of the Theban plays of the master playwright Sophocles was a challenge for us but all of us, with limited resources presented the plays before the audience and made the programme a success," he added.

In ancient Greece, the audience enjoyed the plays staged on a gallery-like open place from dawn to dusk, he added.

"As this was not possible in the present context of the country, we staged the three plays consecutively on a open stage from dusk to 10.30pm in an effort to recreate Greek theatre with the use of masks", said Mubidur Sujat, an activist of Fame, adding that they had practiced the dialogues for six months and during that time they had not performed in any other production.

"The background music and the intelligent use of the lights had me spellbound," said Dular Dasgupta, a well-known theatre activist of the city. He also appreciated the sincere effort of the troupe.

"It is a good sign that the entire Shilpkala Academy premises were teeming with people all the way up to 10:30pm" said Anisur Rahman Nasym, a theatre connoisseur. He, however, criticised the poor sound projection of the choruses.

Mubidur Rahman Sujat and Poly Chowdhury Boby played the roles of Oedipus and Antigone respectively. Swanupama Sengupta, Rumal Barua, Saifur Rahman Parvej, Tapas Chakraborty, Nazia Tabassum Nancy, Shahriar Md. Shiblee and Khadijatul Kubra Rishika also played important roles. Ashim Das designed the music and costumes of the plays.
