At one point, the duo called some 25 locals over the phone who beat up Monirul, police added.
However, eyewitnesses said the two did not call up anyone, and it was the locals who attacked Monirul when they saw him speaking rudely to their "popular figures", Robiul and Nazmul.
Officer-in-Charge of Baraowlia Highway Police Station said they would file a case for obstructing police from discharging their duty.
The two could not be contacted over their phones.

But the RPO provision for independent candidates is arbitrary and contrary to the constitution, Eunus said.
The by-polls will be held on June 12. The constituency fell vacant after ruling party lawmaker Shawkat Hossain Hiron died on April 9.

as Koreans do not like gloomy faces," he told a press conference at a restaurant in the capital. "Quitting job frequently in search of better opportunity makes Bangladeshi workers look less dependable for the employers."
This year Bangladesh has a quota for sending a maximum of 2,700 workers to Korea, he said, but last year it sent only 1,300 though the quota was for 2,000 as per employers' demand.
The EPS Centre run by Human Resources Development Services of Korea's government, also known as HRD Korea, has so far facilitated 10,000 workers' safe migration to Korea in seven years since 2007, when the two countries signed an EPS understanding, said Lee.
It is one of the most transparent systems in the world for recruiting migrant workers, guarding them against fraudulence, forgery and deception by brokers, he said. An aspirant should pay only around US$800, including airfare, once he gets a job through this arrangement, he added.
The EPS Centre does not guarantee a job but offers prospective workers to Korean employers, who choose them as per their requirements, he said. Korea's labour law ensures equal privileges for both local and migrant workers with a minimum wage of $5 per hour, mandatory health insurance and allowances for returning home and retirement.
Currently, there are 12,000 Bangladeshi workers in Korea, of them nearly 800 staying illegally, said Lee, adding that Korea's government had suspended taking workers from Vietnam for past one and a half years due to illegal stay.

organised the seminar, "The Status of Women Representatives in Upazila Election 2014", in the capital's Cirdap auditorium.
Addressing the programme, former caretaker government adviser Rasheda K Chowdhury blamed "money-men-muscle" for women's lagging behind in the race for winning party nomination.
Most of the party posts are held by men, so when it comes to select the nominee, women get less support, said former parliamentarian Rasheda Begum Hira.
The project, "Aparajita-political empowerment of women", funded by the Swiss Agency for Development and Cooperation, started in 2011 in 40 upazilas to increase women's share in local government.
Karmaker showed that a similar decline occurred in the union parishad elections.
The number of female contestants fell from 1.8 lakh in 1997 to 1.24 lakh in 2003, and to 90,000 in 2011, he said, citing the Election Commission data.
Parul Nahar, a nomination seeker for chairman of Hakimpur upazila in Dinajpur this year, said the leaders of her party BNP forced her to withdraw from the election.
Elected from a reserved seat, Ishrat Jahan Sonali, vice-chairwoman of Jhalakathi sadar upazila parishad, said she did not have any decision-making power or any authority to do anything for her voters.
"When I went back to ask for votes this time, naturally my electorate asked me what I gave them in the last five years," said Sonali, who was elected twice, in 2009 and 2014.
Economist Qazi Kholiquzzaman Ahmad, chairman Palli Karma Sahayak Foundation (PKSF), spoke as chief guest.
