remain unemployed in Bangladesh," he said.

The only way to face the challenges is to focus on meeting quality standard through quality assurance, he told a launching ceremony of a project "Quality Assurance Mechanism in Universities", organised by University Grants Commission (UGC) in the capital.

Quality Assurance Unit (QAU) of UGC launched the project with the support of World Bank to promote a quality enhancement culture within the universities.

The minister said some private universities were still not following rules and regulations adding: "Sometimes I cannot do anything because they [the universities] go to the court and have a stay order in their favour to continue operation."

Nahid mentioned that of the 79 private universities, 28 have complied with all the rules under the Private University Act, 2010 while 12 universities almost completed necessary tasks to shift to their new campuses and 11 have started the process.

UGC Chairman Prof AK Azad Chowdhury said many of the private universities were doing well, but still five to six were failing behind. He said they were going to introduce a ranking of the universities on the basis of academic performance soon.

Johannes Zutt, country director of World Bank, Bangladesh and Nepal, Prof M Muhibur Rahman, member of UGC, and Prof Mesbahuddin Ahmed, head of QAU, spoke among others.
