

WHEN BCL STORMS CAPITAL

What the Vs were for (1)? It was supposed to be a mournful rally. Or was it the victory of requisitioning so many buses like the one they were on, creating a severe dearth of public transports in the capital, making poor commuters suffer, including women and infants (2); or was it the victory of keeping traffic in wait while they take over streets creating tailbacks, getting a sense of grandeur (3); or was it for the gridlock they successfully created after the rally (4)? Or perhaps what made them so proud was their show of might just before the PM's arrival at the venue when they fought among themselves for getting "favourable" seats. Let alone all the other "good deeds" they reportedly do all over the country on a daily basis. Ladies and gentlemen, here comes the BCL!

GENETICALLY MODIFIED BT BRINJAL Greens demand stop to farming, marketing

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Green activists yesterday demanded a stop to farming and marketing of Bt brinjal, stating that enough research has not been done to assess the impact of the genetically modified crop on environment and human health.

They also claimed that most farmers who cultivated the crop did not get high yield as promised by the agriculture ministry and Bangladesh Agricultural Research Institute (BARI).

They said seven out of the twenty who planted Bt brinjal made losses as their plants mostly wilted.

The activists were addressing a press conference organised by Bangladesh Environmental Lawyers Association at Dhaka Reporters' Unity. The conference was also attended by the seven farmers of Gazipur who made losses.

Mujibur Rahman of Gazipur's Sreepur upazila said he planted 1,050 seeds on one bigha of land in March, and used fertiliser as per the instructions of the agriculture officer.

However, when flowers began blooming, the plants began dying, he said.

"The agriculture officer and a foreigner visited my field a number of times and carried out tests on the plants, but they could not save the plants," he said.

He further said that he also planted local brinjal saplings alongside the modified crop and those flourished.

Environmental activist Pavel Partho said the crops were not high-yielding for any of the farmers aside from one farmer in Rangpur.

He further said Bt brinjals were being sold in Rangpur without labels violating the law, and that consumers cannot differentiate between normal brinjals and the modified ones.

"Developed countries, especially those in Europe, would not import vegetables from Bangladesh if they are not properly labelled," said Syeda Rizwana Hasan, chief executive of Bela, who chaired the programme.

Representatives from Ubinig, Bangladesh Organic Products Manufacturers Association, Bangladesh Poribesh Andolon, B-safe and Bangladesh Fruits, Vegetables and Allied Products Exporters Association, among others, were present.

Hundreds of activists and supporters from most districts joined it.

Before start of the rally, the activists of Fazlul Haque Hall and Amar Ekushey Hall units of Dhaka University clashed with those of Jagannath University at the venue over sitting arrangements, leaving six injured.

The fighting lasted for 15 minutes when they threw chairs and sticks at each other, said Enamul Haque Prince, a central leader of BCL. The DU unit president and general secretary stopped them.

The PM arrived over one hour after the fighting.

Addressing the rally, Hasina said conspirators of the August 15 and August 21 were still active and asked BCL to strengthen the organisation and remain alert against them.

She said Bangabandhu's historic March 7 speech which inspired the nation to fight against the Pakistani forces in 1971 had got a place in a book of political speeches of 2,500 years around the world.

Hasina criticised BNP founder Ziaur Rahman, former military dictator HM Ershad, and ex-prime minister Khaleda Zia for "rewarding" the killers of Bangabandhu and patronising anti-liberation elements in politics.

In his speech, BCL General Secretary Siddiqui Nazmul Alam said the student body had done many wrongs, consciously or unconsciously, and pledged no to do so in the future.

He also threatened to "remove bricks" from the houses of BNP-Jamaat men across the country if they celebrated August 15 as birthday of Khaleda Zia again.

AL Presidium Member Obaidul Quader and Joint General Secretary Jahangir Kabir Nanak, Vice Chancellors of Dhaka University and Bangabandhu Sheikh Mujib Medical University Prof AAMS Arefin Siddique and Prof Pran Gopal Datta, and lawmaker Tarana Halim also spoke.

using environment-friendly zig-zag technology. After several extensions, DoE fixed July as the final deadline for the updating brick kilns.

In the briefing, Hasan Mahmud said the owners were given much time to modernise their factories. "Those who did not follow government directives must face action," he added.

About amendments to the environment court law, Mahmud said there was no provision in the act for filing appeals against the verdict of the court. The committee therefore asked the ministry officials to incorporate this provision, he said.
