

Arrow and The Flash have staged mini-crossovers during the past year, but during the Dec. 2 episode of The Flash and the Dec. 3 episode of Arrow, there will be a full-fledged crossover event between The CW's DC Comics shows. Excited? You should be. And just to add to the excitement, here are some things we know about this big crossover event. The Flash crossover title The Flash vs. Arrow is quite literal because they would be engaged in combat. The Flash hour will deliver a very big moment for Oliver's storyline. Team Flash could prove vital to helping Team Arrow with one of their biggest mysteries (AKA Sara's unsolved murder). Arrow's Lyla is in danger. Team Flash is forced to deal with the reality of how dangerous things can be. If this peaked your interest, then don't miss these epic crossover episodes as the creators said the next crossover will happen after a while.

PENELOPE SIGNS ON FOR 'ZOO LANDER 2'

We're pretty sure there's a lot more to life than anticipating the sequel to a cult comedy, but a second "Zoolander" movie has been percolating for several years now. The past few months have provided a steady stream of confirmations that the film will indeed become reality, with the latest news indicating that Penelope Cruz has signed on opposite Ben Stiller.

There's no word on what Cruz's role will entail, but it's not hard to imagine her as an equally egomaniacal model who spars with Derek Zoolander. Regardless, if Justin Theroux's script and the rumors that Will Ferrell and Owen Wilson will reprise their roles weren't enough to make "Zoolander 2" feel real, this should do the trick.

Theroux was originally tapped to direct the sequel but the second season of HBO's "The Leftovers" prevents that from happening. Instead, the movie is expected to serve as Stiller's directorial follow-up to "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty."

KHANS PATCH UP

Shahrukh and Salman set aside differences

Salman Khan and Shah Rukh Khan had been at odds for almost half a dozen years but the duo decided to call off the squabble when SRK dropped by at the Khan's to bless Arpita Khan and bonded with the whole family including Salman Khan. When asked, SRK said, "When me and Salman meet personally our relationship is same as what it was 25 years back. There is no bad blood. From the outside, we are hot headed guys and can have issues at times but nothing more to that. Arpita is close to me too. We had to be there for her as it was in essence our sister's wedding".

While this is all great news for fans, was this patch up for real or just for the cameras? Only time will tell.

