

SRK enthused for graphic novel Atharva - The Origin

Bollywood 'Baadshah' Shah Rukh Khan, who will be seen in the title role in upcoming graphic novel "Atharva - The Origin", instantly agreed to be part of the project and that too with a lot of enthusiasm, says its author Ramesh Thamilmani. "We felt the character Atharva and the personality of Shah Rukh Khan matched perfectly. Keeping that in mind, when we pitched the idea to him, he instantly agreed and expressed lots of enthusiasm to be associated with the project," Thamilmani said. Chennai-based Virzu Studios is behind "Atharva...", and they're positive that King Khan will be "pleased and proud with the final product. His involvement will enable the novel to have wide reach". "Atharva...", a mythological fictional graphic novel, is the story of a young king who sets out to uncover his destiny. Set on a vast island in a forgotten past, the story is populated by fantastical birds, beasts and monsters, inventions of the collaborative efforts of the author and artist. "There are no factual, historical or religious mythological references in the story," said Ramesh.

Meet The Man Who Puts Real Science In The Big Bang Theory

A lot of people like The Big Bang Theory - that's a matter of scientific record. But did you know you'd probably like it a lot more if you had a Ph.D. in physics? Although it may seem like a frothy studio-based sitcom on the surface, there is a lot more going on the behind the scenes - and it's all down to one man: David Saltzberg. David Saltzberg is the go to man for science fact-checking in Hollywood. He has a Ph.D. in physics from the University of Chicago, while he conducted his post-doctorate at CERN in Switzerland. What's more, he's currently a professor of physics at UCLA. This makes him ideal to make sure all of the science-y dialogue and props are in order in The Big Bang Theory. Because, you know if there's a mistake, he's going to be flooded with emails from irate, eagle-eyed science enthusiasts.

'Batman v Superman' won't be split into two parts: Cavill

Actor Henry Cavill has denied reports that the upcoming "Batman v Superman: Dawn of Justice" would be split into two parts. The actor, who plays Superman in the highly-anticipated movie, refuted the rumour during a chat, reported Variety Online. In addition to denying the rumour, the "Man of Steel" actor said Ben Affleck was "great" as Batman and shared that he was not injured following fighting scenes opposite Affleck's Caped Crusader. "Are you kidding? I'm the Man of Steel," he joked. When asked if "Batman v Superman" would be more epic than "Avengers: Age of Ultron", he simply said, "You'll see." There were reports that "Batman v Superman: Dawn of Justice" would be split into two parts after a photo of what appeared to be a screengrab from the movie's trailer surfaced. "Batman v Superman: Dawn of Justice" hits theaters on March 25, 2016.

Gwyneth Paltrow: I regret not making sex tape with Brad Pitt

Gwyneth Paltrow has said that she really wished if she could make a sex tape with Brad Pitt when she was dating him.
