

Message from the Vice Chancellor

It always feels good to congratulate fresh new batches of graduates - beaming with joy and happiness at having completed such an important milestone in their lives.

I take this opportunity to express my most sincere congratulations to all the graduates of BBA, MBA, and EMBA batches. Today is a day for celebrating your accomplishments - the fruits of your years of toil. I would also like to express my sincere appreciation and congratulations to all the family members of the graduates, who proudly sit in our audience.

At the same time, I will also like to congratulate all the faculty members, administration and the staff of IBA, for their assistance and guidance in shaping these graduates during their journey at IBA, and for their continuous contribution in making this institute a place of excellence and fine achievements, that the whole of Dhaka University is really proud of.

My dear students, as members of this institute and this university, you have a very rich heritage and legacy to carry forward. Your predecessors have set extraordinary examples and have been the pioneers in their own respective fields in steering the socio economic growth of this country. Now the onus is on you. You have the enormous responsibility of driving the society and economy to new heights, resting on your shoulders. We are very pleased that IBA has so far been excelling well beyond our expectations - making remarkable contributions to the intellectual and professional capabilities of the society and catering to the specialized skill needs of the economy.

For the graduates, I will like to say that this is only the beginning. Education is a lifelong quest and you learn every moment, not only from the institutes you attend but also from real life and your everyday experiences. Keep your eyes and minds open and never stop taking lessons from life. Pursue higher education and degrees, but always remember even the highest of degrees is meaningless if it can't be put to the right use. True education is that what elevates your mind and soul, enlightens your thoughts, and instills good values in you - values that encourage accountability & collective effort at one hand and innovation & individuality on the other; values that strive to promote integrity and respect for diversity and human dignity. I just hope and pray that you are leaving with that kind of an education from here.

As part of the IBA alumni and greater Dhaka University family, you will always find us by your side whenever you will need any form of guidance or assistance. Our prayers and best wishes are always with you. Today is your day, to celebrate and cherish. You have earned it and we wish you a wonderful life ahead. Congratulations to all the graduates once again.

Message from the Special Guest

Dear Graduates,
 First of all, I'd like to congratulate all of you from the class of 2014. All of your hard work has paid off and you will forever remember this day and your time in IBA, University of Dhaka. I would also want to congratulate your family members and friends present here today for being with you throughout the journey.

Founded in 1966, Institute of Business Administration, University of Dhaka has pioneered management education in the country. As a lighthouse, IBA has contributed significantly to shape the corporate sector of Bangladesh. IBA has not only created the example of achieving and maintaining excellence despite limitations and constraints but also has demonstrated their ability to compete at the global level.

As the torchbearers of the best business school in the country and also the alumni of the University of Dhaka, you have some responsibilities. Always remember that our existence today is only possible due to the supreme sacrifices of the martyrs of the language movement and the war of liberation.

I know you all could recall the day when you first entered this campus as a student. Yes, many things have changed in the past few years, but the spirit and vibrancy of the students is always a constant here. Like them, you would also have to continuously keep yourself vibrant and energetic to move ahead in your life.

I would like to mention that the time you have spent here with your friends were equally valuable compared to the class room teachings. Years down the line, the textbooks will change, so will the business world, but these friendships will never depreciate.

I would like to tell the graduates of BBA program that they have a life waiting for them to begin. I would advise you to do experiments with your life as only failures will teach you to find the right path. Try to enjoy every bit of your life and always remember, this is just the beginning. Love, passion and dream - these will guide you to find your destiny.

The challenges of the coming days will be sustainable development and equal access to opportunity. To face these challenges, we need talented individuals like you. The whole world is waiting for you. I would sincerely thank the faculty members and administrative officials of the institute today for their continuous effort to achieve and maintain global standard excellence. Thank you.

Message from the Pro Vice Chancellor (Academic)

My heartfelt congratulations to all the graduating students of BBA, MBA and EMBA program of the Institute of Business Administration (IBA), University of Dhaka. I welcome you all to the graduation ceremony of 2015. IBA has always been regarded as the premiere business school of the country. The continuous success is a testimony to the quality of education and training provided by this institution. It is also a mark of the students' hard work and perseverance, as well as the excellent faculties who have guided and mentored them throughout the last four years. Five years have passed since you started this journey and the biggest blessing is the knowledge and experience you have gathered throughout this time. You have met people, made new friends and lots of memories that you will cherish for the rest of your lives. But you are just stepping into the real world, where you have to learn from your experiences and your mistakes, where you have to utilize the knowledge you have gathered here at IBA. Some of you will enter the corporate world and some of you will pursue entrepreneurship. Whatever you do, I believe that IBA has prepared you for a glorious professional life.

Message from the Director

It is once again that day of the year when my pleasure and pride know no bound seeing these young and bright faces, all dressed up in graduation robes and hats and all beaming with excitement and joy at having completed such an important milestone in their lives. In fact, if I have to pick one single day in the entire year when I take the biggest pride in being a faculty and the director of this institute called IBA, it is perhaps going to be this day of graduation as this is the day when we get to reap the result of all the efforts and hard work that our students and faculties have put in over the years. Congratulations to all the students of BBA, MBA and EMBA Batches who are graduating today! You have once again made us proud.

I realize and appreciate that today is a big day for you, that has taken years in the making. Days after days of hard work, sleepless nights, sacrifice of family life, and forgoing other priorities and leisure and fun time - all these have finally paid off in the form of that single degree that you will be holding in your hands today.

I truly wish that you understand the difference between earning a degree and living up to it. A degree that, also from the leading business institute of the country, is not just about better jobs and greater social status. It confers more responsibilities and duties on you than you can possibly imagine - responsibilities towards the organizations that you will be joining to play a role in their advancement; responsibilities towards the society to be better citizens and contribute towards its progress; responsibilities towards the country to uphold its image better and brighter in front of the whole world; responsibilities towards humanity to serve your fellow human beings to the best of your ability; and of course, last but not the least, responsibilities towards your families to keep them happy and content. And, I would like to believe that earning a degree from IBA and the time that you have spent here, have been able to instill the basic values and qualities that you will be requiring to fulfill each of the responsibilities that I just stated.

Business education is not only about learning the theories in books or about intellectual discussions inside or outside classes. It also helps to shape up your individual traits; makes you more observant and prudent in handling different types of situations; and teaches you to be adaptive while also challenge the status quo. Business education opens up the path on which, if you tread with wisdom and confidence, you can transform yourself to a great leader. It is a lifestyle that you are offered which, if nurtured and taken care of, can elevate you to a league of extraordinary leaders whose legacy can trigger waves of change in our society, economy and moral practice.

Graduates from our institution have always played a critical role in reforming the business and social environment of this country. I am confident you will continue to carry the legacy forward and take it to unparalleled heights. But as future leaders of the business community my earnest request to you would be - please continue to have your thirst for knowledge, insatiable hunger to improve, wisdom of looking beyond failures, humbleness of accepting success and the foresight of transforming a vision to reality.

In the end, I will like to emphasize just one more point to all my students - in the quest of becoming successful in your professional life, never lose sight of the bigger things in life, never give up the quest of becoming a good human being first.

On that note I will like to end my speech. Congratulations to all the graduates of BBA, MBA, and EMBA batches once again. My best wishes are always with you.

Message from the Pro Vice Chancellor (Administration)

Another batch of innovative and brilliant minds is at the peak of the bright years of their student life and they are about to enter the ever-changing, dynamic and competitive business world and I am extremely delighted to be a part of this great event- 2015 graduation ceremony of the Institute of Business Administration (IBA), University of Dhaka. I believe that the students symbolize the culture and the values of their institution. Ever since its inception, IBA has been infusing the values of change and innovation into its students. Over four decades, hundreds of lives have been built and moulded within its walls. It has nurtured and tended to some of the greatest minds and some of the most talented individuals the country has ever seen and I am confident that IBA will continue to play this role of shaping the future of our country. However the ethereal standard set by the previous graduates must be protected and for that purpose we must continue to improve and prosper. Let our excellence not only be a benchmark for future achievements, but also be a grade to cross and go even further. I congratulate the graduates once again on their achievements and their hard work to have come this far. Good Luck on your journey ahead.
