RUN ALL NIGHT

Liam Neeson Goes to War

Run All Night stars Neeson as Jimmy Conlon, a seasoned hitman (once known as "The Gravedigger") who knows his days are numbered, before his life ends at the wrong end of a gun. However, when Jimmy's estranged grown-up son Mike (Joel Kinnaman) lands in trouble, Jimmy chooses to turn against his longtime boss, Shawn Maguire (Ed Harris), in order to find some redemption for his past sins... but first, he'll have to protect his son from a small army of professional killers and crooked cops for the next 24 hours. You can get a few of the finer plot details for Run All Night from the newly-released trailer, but the general idea seems to be that, after the first act, it's one long race to the finish line, with Neeson and Kinnaman (star of the 2014 RoboCop reboot) struggling to stay alive. Run All Night opens in theaters on 17 April 2015.

BENJAMIN BRATT Joins Bryan Cranston In 'The Infiltrator'

Benjamin Bratt has been set to star alongside Bryan Cranston and Diane Kruger in The Infiltrator, a fact-based thriller that will be directed by Brad Furman (The Lincoln Lawyer). The pic is produced by Good Films' Miriam Segal, and production begins shortly. Based on the Robert Mazur autobiography with a script by Ellen Brown Furman, The Infiltrator centers on a customs and excise agent (Cranston) who went undercover as a money launderer and infiltrated the bankers behind the Medellin drug cartel. Bratt plays Roberto Alcanio, the agent's contact who dealt directly with cartel board members including Pablo Escobar. Bratt is also starring in Ride Along 2 with Ice Cube and Kevin Hart, set for release in January 2016.

Heart thumping third trailer of
'AVENGERS 2
 -Age of the Ultron'
 released

This week, Robert Downey Jr gave a massive surprise releasing the third trailer on his Twitter account, saying "I got a fever...and the only prescription...is more Ultron." While a lot will look familiar, it's the most comprehensive look at the film we've seen yet, including just how massive and global a problem Ultron is. There's a lot of new shots of revved up gadgets, black widow's new suit and another scene from the epic hulk versus hulk buster fight sequence, not to mention a number of other action sequences (including an awesome team shot of the avengers jumping off of a crashing jeep) and a brief close-up of Vision himself.
