

The Daily Star relaunched its website during its anniversary celebrations on Friday night at the Bangabandhu International Conference Centre. The paper thanked the readers, advertisers and patrons for being with the newspaper in its journey to ensure people's right to know. The Daily Star reiterated its mission to keep the people informed, without fear or favour, and make every effort to uncover corruption and hit out against nepotism and abuse of power. The paper promised to cater to the readers' need more effectively in an age where information technology plays a major role in the dissemination of information.
