KHULNA

BAR ON MOULVIBAZAR ADIVASIS USING GOVT ROAD

Solidarity for Khasis' rights getting louder

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Human and social rights activists in the capital are raising their voice protesting the bar imposed by the Jhimai tea estate authorities two weeks ago on the Khasi community in Moulvibazar's Kulaura upazila from using a government road through the tea garden.

They say this, carried out seemingly with the local administration's silent support, was a conspiracy to evict from their ancestral land the nearly 1,400 people of 72 Khasi families who use the road to go to markets or bring back goods. The Khasi community has now been stranded in their five villages, Puran Choilta, Balaima, Amuli, Kalapahar (Notun Chilta) and Jhimai Punjee. The restriction is the result of a disagreement between the Khasi people and the tea garden authorities over ownership of 300 acres of land, locals said.

The tea estate was given 672 acres of land in 1937 by the then government but they planted only on some 300 acres.

The Khasi people claimed the land as they have been for years living there and using the land for betel leaf cultivation, which was their main income source, while the tea garden authorities claimed that the Khasi people grabbed 300 acres of land. Nine human rights organisations formed a human chain and organised a rally in front of the capital's Jatiya Press Club yesterday demanding withdrawal of the restriction and an order to fell trees in the area.

The organisations were Bangladesh Paribesh Andolon (Bapa), Ain o Salish Kendra, Bangladesh Adivasi Forum, Nijera Kori, Bangladesh Environment Lawyers Association, Association for Land Reforms and Development, Green Voice, Khasi Students Union, and Kapaeeng Foundation. Stating that a government official had gone to evict

Jhimai Punjee's residents, Bangladesh Adivasi Forum General Secretary Sanjeeb Drong said he did not know under which authority or law had the public servant "tried to grab indigenous people's lands on behalf of a tea estate". Right to land, development and culture are indigenous people's basic human rights. "We search for the state to protect indigenous people's rights but we do not find it," he added. Prof Mesbah Kamal of Dhaka University said the eviction effort was part of a larger plan to displace indigenous people from their land. "Holders of foreign and local looters' capital violate customary rights of indigenous people by grabbing their lands to control them. The state is responsible for protecting their rights. However, it does not come up to help the indigenous people," he added. He urged the activists of non-communal movements to stand beside the indigenous people. Prof Farida Khan of University of Wisconsin, USA and Bapa Joint Secretary Sharif Jamil also spoke.

Children out of school share woes with Nahid

Fifteen-year-old Sagar Pattadar does not dare to dream of a better life even if he gets a chance at his right to education.

Hailing from char area in Faridpur, Sagar, who lost his father at a young age, has to work in the field with his mother to run the family and so has neither the time nor the money for a formal education.

Ironically he was born in the year during which the Millennium Development Goals, which included primary education for all by 2015, were drawn up.

Sagar's story and those of 68 other children born in 2000 were narrated at a programme titled "Amader Jiboner Kotha [Stories of our life]" organised by Campaign for Popular Education (Campe) at the LGED building in the capital yesterday.

The children brought from across the country also included dropouts who had no financial problems for doing so.

Their stories were compiled in a book, Ekhon Ami Ponoro -- Amader Jiboner Kotha, which was launched at the programme. The book included their reasons for not enrolling and for dropping out.

Zakia of Barisal said she dropped out because of harassment by local miscreants she faced on her way to and from school.

Ibrahim. Listening to the children's stories, chief guest at the programme, Education Minister Nurul Islam Nahid said, "Age is country." The minister referred to non-formal education and Bangladesh Open University for children who missed the opportunity to avail formal education. Rasheda K Choudhury, executive director of Campe, said an additional US$22 billion is required to bring all children of the world under the umbrella of educa-major problem. "My focus is on transparency and justice. So I pledge to recover open spaces from grabbers," he said, adding that free WiFi connections would be available in the parks.

Citing a survey that only 25 percent of the 2,500 tonnes of waste that the city corporation handles daily is recycled, Annisul said he would turn "trashes" into "assets" by recycling solid waste and producing electricity.

He also plans introduction of waste segregation. There would be street bins and every household would be given three separate containers for putting separate waste, the aspirant said. As the mosquito menace tops the list of 52 major problems identified through a survey in the north, Annisul said efficient foggers and hand sprays would be purchased, and regular cleaning drives would be conducted in lakes and ponds to fight the menace.

Dhaka North City Corporation currently spends Tk 5 crore to control mosquitoes, he said, adding, "...I will increase the budget."

RAPE, DOUBLE MURDER IN GAZIPUR

their house by breaking open the door at Atlora in Gazipur's Sreepur upazila early Friday. Dr Abdus Salam Sarkar of Shaheed Tajuddin Ahmad Medical College Hospital, where the autopsies were conducted, confirmed that Arifa was raped. Arifa's brother Mujibur Rahman, 23, filed a murder case with the police station accusing unknown miscreants.

However, police could arrest none in this connection.

and they would be given licenses. "If they fail to follow the timing, they would lose licenses." Immediate transfer of garbage and waste segregation are two specific measures that Saki plans to take to set the city's messy waste management right. "The residents will be trained to put organic waste, industrial waste, and plastic waste in three separate containers," he said, adding that electricity and bio-fuel would be produced by recycling the waste then. As in many places, parks are non-existent, there would be arrangements so that the playgrounds of government

For him, using insecticides to kill mosquitoes is not scientific and healthy. "Corruption is also involved in the process," Saki said.

He would put efforts into cleaning waterbodies and ditches with the help of volunteers.

garbage will be collected between 12:00 midnight and 5:00am and all the drains will be kept clean. Training cleaners and use of compression technology will be two other measures to improve the waste management system. Eviction drives with support from the law enforces and advices from locals will be conducted to free the city's parks, said Tabith. He would also assess the lessees of the parks, and unsatisfactory performance would lead to revocation of the agree-Tabith believes that a city with improved waste management and clean drains will make the fight against mosquitoes a lot easier.

"Besides, waterbodies and lakes will be cleaned regularly," he said, adding that the measures, which are not injurious to health, would be adopted to destroy the dens and breeding grounds of mosquitoes. Office To Let
