

COMING SOON
MAD MAX
FURY ROAD

Mad Max: Fury Road is an upcoming post-apocalyptic action film directed, produced and co-written by George Miller, and the fourth film of Miller's Mad Max franchise. The first film of the franchise in 30 years, Fury Road is also the first Mad Max film not to feature Mel Gibson as "Mad" Max Rockatansky, with Tom Hardy replacing him. It also stars Charlize Theron as Imperator Furiosa. Haunted by his turbulent past, Mad Max believes the best way to survive is to wander alone. Nevertheless, he becomes swept up with a group fleeing across the Wasteland in a War Rig driven by Furiosa. They are escaping a Citadel tyrannized by the Immortan Joe, from whom something irreplaceable has been taken. Enraged, the Warlord marshals all his gangs and pursues the rebels ruthlessly in the high-octane Road War that follows. The film will be set shortly before the events of Mad Max 2: The Road Warrior. The original Mad Max actor Mel Gibson has a cameo role in the film as well, which comes out 15 May 2015.

FIRST OFFICIAL LOOK AT
JARED LETO AS THE JOKER

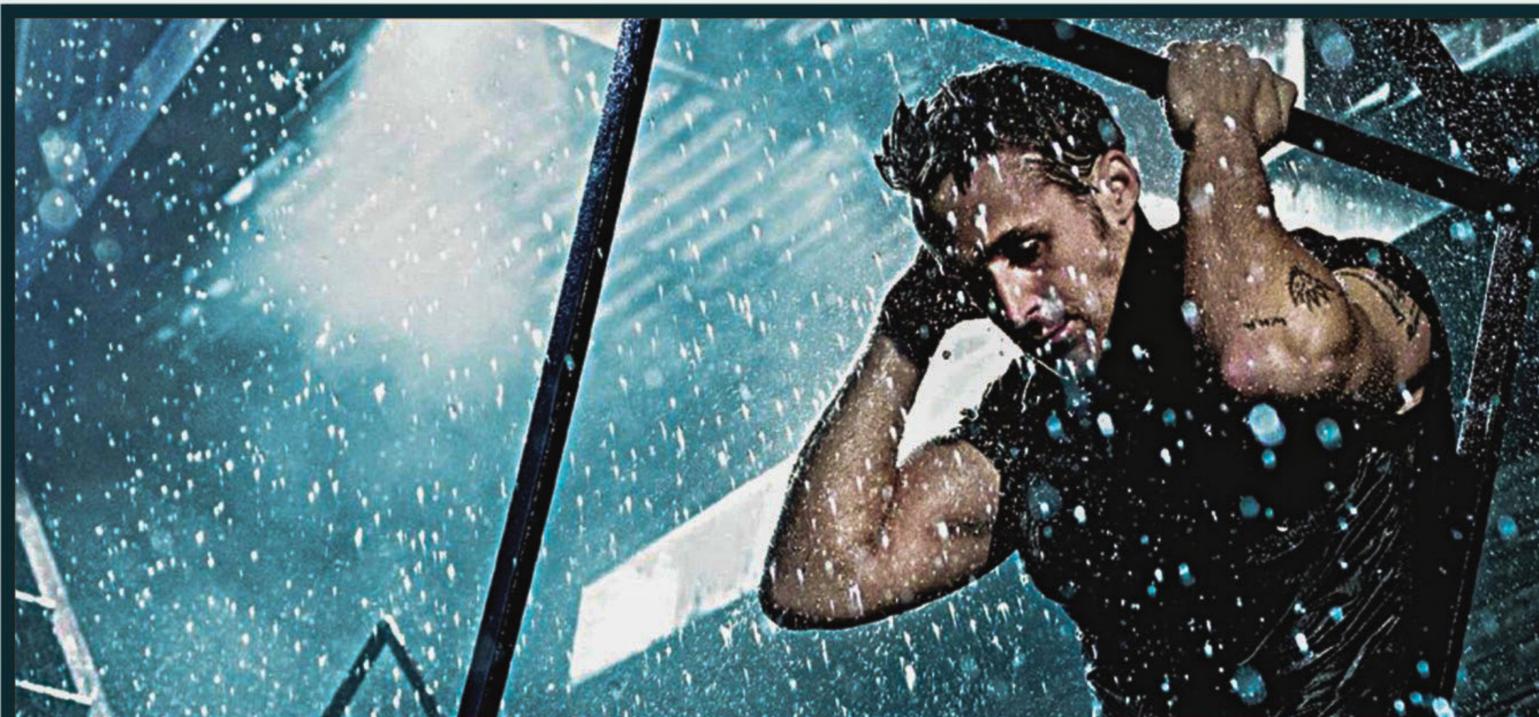

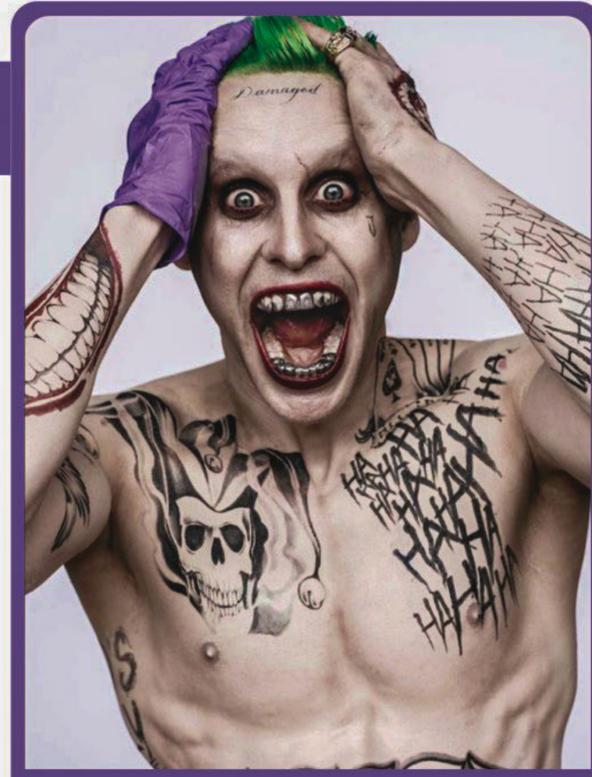

After weeks of teases including a haircut and some sneakily snapped private images, director David Ayer used Twitter last week for a reveal from his supervillain team-up film Suicide Squad. Fans were stunned by the first image of Jared Leto as the new version of the Joker for the film, which began production this month. Leto's Joker looks unlike any live-action Joker we've seen before, and different from any Joker the mainstream public is familiar with. But comic book readers will probably recognize some of the key influences for this latest big screen incarnation of the Clown Prince of Crime, and however strange he might look, he's definitely adapted from specific comics and is aesthetically pretty faithful to them.

Everybody knows a lot is riding on Batman v Superman, as it will officially set up most of the rest of Warner's superhero universe on film. But it's fair to say there's much riding on Suicide Squad as well, since reactions to that film — which releases in late-2016, eight months after Batman v Superman is expected to blow the doors off the box office — are going to come early in the DC world's creation and will affect how audiences feel about spinoffs outside of the studio's superhero team-up event movies. In particular, the Joker is probably the most well-known and popular villain of the superhero cinematic genre, and after Heath Ledger's beloved and Oscar-winning turn in the role, the bar is set high and everyone will be watching closely to see how the new version holds up by comparison. Fair or not, that comparison will have a huge impact on the overall perception and success of Suicide Squad; which is why Warner turned to Oscar-winning actor Jared Leto.

Leto amazed with his award-winning performance in Dallas Buyer's Club in 2013, as well as his popular roles in the films Fight Club, Requiem for a Dream, Chapter 27, Lord of War, and in the television series My So-Called Life. Critical and fan reactions to his casting as the Joker was overwhelmingly positive.

RYAN GOSLING

in talks to star in 'Blade Runner' sequel

Ryan Gosling is reportedly in talking terms to star in the sequel of classic sci-fi film 'Blade Runner' alongside Harrison Ford. The sequel which has been gestating for years will see original director Ridley Scott to executive produce the project, the Verge reported. The 34-year-old actor will be reprising his role as replicant bounty hunter Rick Deckard and Ford wouldn't be the star of the film. The sequel is being directed by Prisoners director Denis Villeneuve and the shooting for the movie will commence in summer of 2016. A release date has not been announced yet.