OF PAPERS AND DESIGNS

The Conqueror Corporate Identity Design Contest, 2015

ELITA KARIM

There is something special about paper that only a book lover or a stationery crazy person will be able to comprehend. The fresh smell of newspaper early in the morning is as addictive as turning the pages of a new book. For an artist, the white space on the canvas is a playground for ideas to unravel and creativity to flow.

For all you art enthusiasts, sketch artists, graphic designers, students and professionals – look out for The Conqueror Corporate Identity Design Contest, 2015, to let your imagination run wild! It is a unique platform for those who would like to showcase their talent.

Either a grainy feel or the thick multitude – touching paper with your fingers and feeling its intensity is definitely the first step to winning this competition. "This contest is much more than just sitting in front of your computer and designing the logo," says Farzeen K Chowdhury, Director, Paper Studio. "The graphic artists would have to first feel our paper, explore possibilities and then generate ideas. For instance, a visiting card, a poster or an envelope are all made of paper, however, the designs incorporated and ideas implemented are worlds apart. We would like our participants to first think of the end product, and then generate ideas and designs."

Presented by Paper Studio, the last day of submission is May 24, 2015. For more information visit www.paperstudiobd.com.

THE WAKE OF DISASTER

PHOTOS: M R HASAN

As the World faces its problems with hate, war and terror, and we see countries demolished by the power of people, we get angry, we cry, we pray, we fight back. But what happens when we watch a beautiful country break down into rubble, right in front of our very eyes, and are helpless to stop it?

Due to tectonic stress buildup around the Himalayan area, Nepal has been experiencing a series of earthquakes since April 25, 2015. Bangladeshi photographer M R Hasan visited Nepal after the tragedy, and this was what he witnessed with a broken heart.

Around 900 Rohingya and Bangladeshi migrants were able to reach the shore in Indonesia and Thailand on May 17, as Myanmar undermined calls for a coordinated response to Southeast Asia's human-trafficking crisis by threatening to boycott a planned summit.

The Indonesian and Malaysian policy of turning away stricken boats filled with Bangladeshis and ethnic Rohingya from Myanmar has been met with outrage, including from Washington and the United Nations.
