People who have the urge to get back home during the Eid break, especially by train, have one more thing to worry about. With less than a week left for Eid-ul-Fitr, while the rest of the world is busy buying last-minute necessities, all we care about is buying a train ticket – a ticket that will take us home and complete our Eid. As simple as it sounds, in reality it is no less than going through a real ordeal. Read the struggles of getting home from the diary of a homebound soul, in our spotlight on pages 8 and 9.

Eid Mubarak!

INSIDE

3 A HISTORIC LIGHT OF HOPE
Tells the tale of the first-ever arrest of three youths for abusing a street dog that reveals the rise in public concern for animal welfare in Bangladesh.

5 A RIGHT OR A COMMODITY?
Talks about how imposing VAT on higher education in private universities is shattering the dreams of thousands of students.

12 FOR THE YOUTH, BY THE YOUTH
An enlightening interview with Maimuna Ahmed, a teacher-turned-entrepreneur and founder of Teach for Bangladesh, a non-profit organisation.

13 OH, THE FLYING SWINGS!
Talks about the journey of Dhaka Shishu Park, the country's first amusement park.

This Eid, we thank you for your blessings

Thanks to you, children will have an Eid to remember

Many of you have availed our Ramadan offer and submitted the receipts. Your participation has made it possible for children at Shishu Polli Plus to receive brand new toys.

Thank you for spreading the joy.
