

Bedroom's sidekick

A bedside table lives a long and sad life. Always taken for granted and never once appreciated for the services provided. Not only would our bed be awfully lonely without its pal, the bedside table,

It is right there, literally at arm's length, carrying the weight of all the books we thought we would read but haven't had the time to, safe keeping 2-3 different pairs of glasses in different drawers and, of course, getting new water rings from the condensation dripping glass that apparently doesn't need a coaster. It is constantly a mess and, eventually, gets used to being ignored.

Well, it's time we pay these tables the kind of attention they deserve. Options are unlimited. You can go for the Victorian ones or the modern ones. If your bed doesn't come with a pair of bedside tables, you can buy them separately. Just make sure they match the colour of the
