Back home from sea of death

BELAL HOSSAIN BIPOB

Ismail looked up at the sky and took a deep breath.

"I saw death so close. For 16 to 17 hours, I along with 40 to 50 people tried to stay afloat in the water," he recalled.

This is how the 22-year-old Bangladeshi began the tale of his survival.

Their rickety boat sank in the Mediterranean Sea off the Libyan coast in Tripoli on August 24, but he and 24 other Bangladeshis survived.

Yesterday around 5:00am, they returned home by a Turkish Airlines flight.

Ismail said there were around 600 passengers on the upper and lower decks of the boat. But it started to sink one hour after sailing off around 2:00am. He was on the upper deck.

"Around 300 passengers, mostly women and children, at the lower deck died, as they did not know how to swim. Those of us who were on the upper deck could do nothing to help them. We just tried to save our lives," he said.

"Everyone was screaming, crying and praying to Allah." Ismail said he managed to survive by clinging to a wooden plank.

After several hours, a rescue boat arrived. But only 50 to Different cattle markets in the capital are teeming with sacrificial animals as traders wait for the sale to begin in a day or two.

"Our booths will start receiving Hasil [charge for the purchasing price paid by the buyers] from Monday or Tuesday. But we are allowing the traders to take their cattle to the field," said Masud Rana, member of a committee which has got the Sadeque Hossain Khoka playground in Dholai Khal area on lease to set up a cattle market.

Traders started to take their animals to different makeshift markets in Dhaka from Friday. A Dhaka South City Corporation official said the traders had been asked not to do so before yesterday.

The Daily Star saw several thousands of sacrificial animals on East End Club playground at Dhupkhola in Gandaria area, Sadeque Hossain Khoka playground and Balurmah adjoining Brothers Union Club at Kamalapur yesterday.

Some cattle were on the adjacent streets, blocking traffic movement and causing sufferings to commuters.

Masud Rana said they had to keep some animals on street as the Sadeque
