Bangladesh has succeeded in fighting radicalisation but it might be a victim of extremism, he said, adding that socio-economic and political issues were often the root causes of radicalisation, and terrorism could not always be countered through the use of force.
"Ideology is very important," the retired general said, adding it was a major concern today in South Asia including in Bangladesh and India.
He called for greater cooperation and intelligence sharing among the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation (Saarc) countries to fight terrorism.
Regarding Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina's proposal for setting up a multi-country counter-terrorism taskforce, the expert said it might not happen due to trust deficit among the countries.
He said terrorism might proliferate for factors like sub-national or minority alienation, faith in extremist ideology, ignorance, lack of education, proxy cross-border interest, safe drug dealing, and illegal arms trade.
Apart from strong cyber efforts and partnership among media, institutions, and think-tanks, Hasnain said, all should follow the democratic process for fighting the threat.
In counter-terrorism efforts, the roles of local police are ignored but they are crucial because they know many things, he said.
Presided over by BISS Chairman Ambassador Munshi Faiz Ahmad, the lecture was attended by diplomats, civil and military officers, academics, and researchers. BISS Director General Maj Gen AKM Abdur Rahman delivered the welcome address.
