Furious husband tries to gouge out wife's eye

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Mymensingh

Parents of Jinnat Fatema Runa met her husband's demand for dowry time and again over the last four years but the man became more brutal in the pursuit of more money. On Sunday night, Runa wanted to put an end to the persisting physical and mental pressure of her husband Bulbul Ahmed, of Gadumia village in Bhaluka upazila, Mymensingh, and so she refused to ask her father, who is a retired school-teacher, further for money. Overtaken by fury, Bulbul, 35, attacked Runa and tried to gouge out her right eye. The eye suffered vitreous hemorrhage and serious damage to its retina, said Mohammad Habibullah, assistant professor of the eye department of Mymensingh Medical College Hospital. After the incident, her neighbours first took her to Bhaluka Upazila Health

A planning ministry official said the project would be implemented completely with public money. Dr Samanta Lal Sen, chief coordinator of the burn units across the country, told The Daily Star that the construction work of the project is likely to begin by next month. Once set up, the institute would be the largest of its kind not only in South Asia but also in the world, he claimed, adding that one of its main aims would be to produce burn specialists and plastic surgeons of international standards. He said currently there are just 52 plastic surgeons for around 6 lakh burn victims across the country. Initially every year, the institute would be able to produce 10 to 12 doctors who would attain the Master of Science in Plastic Surgery to be posted to different burn units, expected to be set up at every district under the institute. Mutant mosquitoes 'resist malaria'

BBC ONLINE

US scientists say they have bred a genetically modified (GM) mosquito that can resist malaria infection. If the lab technique works in the field, it could offer a new way of stopping the biting insects from spreading malaria to humans, they say. The scientists put a new "resistance" gene into the mosquito's own DNA, using a gene editing method called Crispr. And when the GM mosquitoes mated - their
