

LIFE IN A DOOMED CITY

THOUSANDS of low-income people migrate to Dhaka from different corners of the country, looking for a better life. Unfortunately, most of them end up in slums and shanties in the capital which is already stretched to its limits and identified as the second worst livable city in the world. The photos show a slice of the everyday life of those living in shanties in Tejgaon and Jurain. Life here runs along the railway lines. Danger of accidents barely matters when reality is already too cruel for them.

Photo: PALASH KHAN

