

GHOSTS OF CHRISTMAS TV PAST

I miss Christmas day spent in front of the TV as a child. The channels do still make Christmas an occasion for some good TV, but honestly, you'll see Home Alone this year and every year. What you won't find on the TV anymore, but are still lurking about on YouTube and such, are masterworks such as these:

"Hey Arnold!": Arnold's Christmas. For what's essentially a comedy, this could be a beautiful show. This one's about Mr. Hyunh.

Kenan & Kel: Merry Christmas, Kenan: Kenan plays Santa and learns a lesson about selflessness. That he forgets in the next episode, naturally.

Bugs Bunny's Looney Christmas Tales: Every Looney Tunes character you'd ever want to see.

Yogi Bear's All-Star Comedy Christmas Caper: The Hanna-Barbera variant of the above.

APP REVIEW

SOCCER GIFS

RUMMAN R KALAM

Platform: Android
Developer: The Eagle Has Landed

When you're on the move or if you cannot find that perfect goal you saw today, it can be a huge hassle to search for videos or gifs. What I did was go to Reddit's /r/soccer and kept scrolling or hitting the refresh button until I found the link. Things got even better when Streamable and Gfycat was introduced which meant that the goals weren't heavy on data like gif files are. Keeping this in mind, Reddit user /u/theseagullhaslanded decided to make an app that addresses this issue by serving all the latest gifs straight to the app from /r/soccer submissions.

While the app is ad-supported, they aren't obtrusive and the best part is the sweet, sweet material design using cards for each goal.

One thing you need remember is that not all of the videos/gifs will have sound. If it's an Imgur or a Gfycat link, it won't carry sound but if it's a Streamable link it will have sound most of the time and Streamable links tend to be longer in length with multiple angles at times.

Soccer GIFs is one of those apps that you won't know you needed it until you get it. Plus who doesn't like seeing the best goals around the world?
