CPJ welcomes Rajib Road crashes kill six murder verdict

DIPLOMATIC CORRESPONDENT

The Committee to Protect Journalists (CPJ) has welcomed the convictions in blogger Ahmed Rajib Haider murder case.

"The convictions in the murder of Ahmed Rajib Haider mark a long overdue but encouraging first step in addressing the violence directed against bloggers in Bangladesh," CPJ Asia Research Associate Sumit Galhotra said in a statement on Thursday.

"However, until the mastermind has been apprehended justice remains incomplete.

"If Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina's government is committed to protecting the country's independent voices, it must act decisively to deliver justice in the murders of other bloggers and ensure the protection of those who remain at risk," he added.

On Thursday, a Dhaka court handed down death penalty to two students for hacking Rajib to death in Mirpur three years ago.

as the authorities concerned have taken no measure to check it as the focus is always on vehicular pollution.

Dr Mahfuzur Rahman Bhuiyan, a former national consultant of World Health Organisation, said the number of patients suffering from respiratory diseases such as emphysema, bronchitis and asthma have increased in the city due to growing dust pollution.

"As concentration of dust particles in the air is on the rise day by day, most city dwellers are suffering from common cold and cough problems," he said.

Dr Mahfuz, grants manager of the Campaign for Tobacco Free Kids, said people were being exposed to dust when they go to office or works. "So, they can not concentrate on their works."

As dust generates wax in human ears, he said, patients of ear infections was also increasing in the city.

He said airborne dust from construction sites was a problem for a number of reasons as it creates health hazards, particularly for those suffering from respiratory problems, and causes environmental degradation, including air and water pollution.

Citing a World Health Organization study, Bangladesh Poribesh Andolon General Secretary Abdul Matin said the capital was one of the cities in the world with the most air pollution in 2012. He observed that air pollution has increased in recent days.

Dhaka city is a storehouse of air pollution where there is no guideline to check it, he said, adding that dust has been contributing to the rapid rise of lung diseases and allergy among city dwellers.

Former Asian Development Bank consultant and urban planner Khondker Neaz Rahman said dust containing fly ash, which comes from construction sites, was very harmful for human health. He suggested construction firms working in the capital to take necessary measures to minimise generation of dust. Although airborne dust has been emerging as a severe threat to the city dwellers, the Department of Environment (DoE) is yet to announce any guideline to check it, he said.

DoE Director General M Raisul Alam Mondal said the DoE does not have any guideline to check dust but it has been working sincerely to minimise air pollution in the country.

Bangladesh needs new generation for development

Says president

UNB, Jhenidah

The nation now needs a new generation, which will lead it to its peak in terms of development and progress, said President Abdul Hamid yesterday. "The nation looks to the new generation with the hope that they will come forward for the country's development. The responsibility of the government is to create an environment conducive for the new generation to utilise opportunities and take the country forward," he said.

The president was addressing the 12th reunion of Jhenidah Ex-Cadet Association on the premises of the cadet college in Jhenidah.

Mentioning that the present world is becoming more challenging due to continuous changes, innovation and advancement, Abdul Hamid hoped that a proper plan would be in place to inspire people to serve the nation.

"I am sure the young generation will be able to make a big difference and set an example. Bangladesh will find the ladder of development from their strong leadership in the future," he added.

Hamid asked the present and former students of the cadet college to devote themselves to the welfare of people.

Jhenidah Ex-Cadet Association President SK Maruf Hasan and Principal of Jhenidah Cadet College Col Sadikul Bari also addressed the programme.
