CELEBRATING LIFE 2015

DISTRICT FESTIVALS: AFTERTHOUGHTS

I guess the most apt way of describing this year's Celebrating Life's districts festivals would be Unexpected or Unanticipated. What we mean by that is that we were simply unprepared for the amount of love that people all over the country and of all ages have for our country's rich culture and also of Celebrating Life. Even when we thought we might not get that big of a crowd, we were badly mistaken, as every venue in every district would be packed beyond maximum capacity, with the crowds going wild with performances from various popular artists of the country. Armed with this knowledge and confidence, we will now target even bigger audience numbers and bring performance from even more renowned artists to make Celebrating Life the best it can be.

Arnob's performance in Khulna University of Engineering & Technology (KUET) was the one that caused quite a bit of confusion for us. We are of course aware of Arnob's vast popularity here, but over there, we had our doubts. However, those doubts were put to rest as we were constantly hounded by the students for information and confirmation of whether Arnob would really play there. When his performance started, all hell broke loose. The entire university field was literally swamped with so much people that you wouldn't be able fit a sheet of paper in between them! Arnob himself was also very happy with the turnout and he kept on insisting on stage that had he known about Celebrating Life's events before, he would have participated a long
