

Fashion for children

'Tis the party season again! Weddings, rooftop BBQ parties, picnics, and what not. While you pick outfits for yourself for these social gatherings, especially weddings, engagement and birthday parties, as a parent, you also have to select clothes and shoes for your young child.

Dresses never go out of fashion, they just don't. This season, dresses with glitter and sequins are in for little girls. A dress with a black terry top with all-over glitter and a chiffon skirt with pleats can be a timeless partywear for your five-year-old.

There are also some things that you can do at home without making much investment. For instance, you can sew beads and rhinestones on your child's simple-looking dress to transform it into a partywear. A handful of rhinestones around the neck of a dress will change the way it looks, but do not overdo because you do not want your little girl's dress to have as many stones as your kurta does. Keep it simple and tasteful!

Go for shades like white, off-white, navy blue, gold, black, and red when choosing your girl's party outfit. A red-gold-black fit-and-flare plaid dress with a bow around the waist will look equally good on a toddler as well as a 10-year-old. To make a sleeveless or short sleeve dress fit for a cold evening, simply pair it with a soft, fine-knit shrug or cardigan.

The nights are cold, so if your child is attending a dinner, a pair of tights are a must -- they also add elegance to a child's outfit.

A pair of black tights will go great with most dresses. Black shoes are also an essential item to a little girl's wardrobe! Black shoes with glossy upper are in fashion and they are perfect for any formal event. Heels, high or low, are a no for little girls as they are not only bad for your child's growing feet, they also make your child appear older than her age. Opt for flat shoes for your girl. Flat shoes with glitter, pearl, or rhinestone upper will look adorable on her little feet.

Your little girl's outfit will look incomplete
