

without some fancy hair accessories. Headbands, pins, and jaw clips with sequins, pearls, crystals, and stones will add a nice glitter to her hair. If her hair is long enough for braids, make braids and add beads - she will bag tons of compliments for this simple yet fun hairdo.

Although many mothers do, but you seriously do not need to take your daughter to a beauty salon for a hairdo. Most of the time, the salons make your little girl look like a teen. Besides, hair styling products should not be used on young children. Your daughter will enjoy many, many years of adulthood in the future, so right now, she does not really need to look like her mother in appearance.

Also, no make-up for small girls -- makeup makes little girls look older than their actual age. Mental health experts state that make-up, tight clothing, high heels, and fancy hairdos often lead to "hyper-sexualisation" of children, and that parents should think before dressing their young daughters.

Do you have a little boy at home? If yes, and you are looking for ideas to dress him for the next party, know that your options are probably not as varied as they are for your little girl. But your young fellow can garner compliments and praises from everyone by donning a pair of trousers, or even a denim, and a solid-coloured vest over a full sleeve plaid shirt for the next party. A bow tie and a pair of shiny black shoes will complete his look.

A black or navy blue blazer over a white or light blue full sleeve shirt will be good for a more formal occasion like a close relative's wedding. It may also be a good time to invest in a complete suit for your boy, or even a tuxedo. But remember that a tux and bow tie will perhaps look better on a 9-year-old boy than a toddler, who will perhaps become bored of a formal outfit after a couple of hours. So, think twice before making an investment in your child's suit.

For small boys, a clip-on tie is always the better option, as they cannot stand wearing a regular tie for too long. For small boys, go for pants with an elastic waistband, as they are comfy. Black shoes go great with most outfits, but it may be a good idea to keep a pair of brown shoes handy, too. For big boys, a belt is a must-have. A pair of dress pants worn with a blazer but without a belt might make people wonder if something is missing.

Last but not least, shop for your children's clothes, shoes and accessories keeping in mind their actual age.
