

Walking Speed

Say you're walking on the footpath in a haste. But the guy walking in front of you is slow and is blocking the entire path, so you can't even bypass him. That's annoying, isn't it? Similarly, you should be careful about your walking speed, for others behind you may be getting irritated. Don't walk too slowly. If you need to walk slow for some reason, stick to the left and allow sufficient room for others to pass. Remember, the street isn't made exclusively for you.

Acknowledge Your Twitter Followers

Assuming that you don't have a lot of followers, whenever someone "follows" you on Twitter, it is customary that you follow them back. This is no writ to abide by, but a good practice nonetheless. That's because when someone follows you and you don't follow them back, they might get offended and unfollow you. However, this doesn't apply if you have privacy concerns, in which case you can block particular users.

Reply to your followers' tweets every now and then, and they'll return the favour.
