

BAAPJAN-ER BIOSCOPE airs at minimal fee

After being taken down from theatres on the first week of its release, the liberation war-centric film "Baapjan-er Bioscope" has been using alternative means as a method of screening. As a continuation of those efforts, the film was screened at the Islamic University campus for a nominal fee. It was announced beforehand by director Riazul Rizu that the film would be screened at the central auditorium of the university for 2 days, and interested viewers can enjoy the production for a minimal fee.

The movie was released across 41 halls last January, lead by Shatabdi Wadud and Sanjida Tonmoy; supported by Shahiduzzaman Selim, Masud Mohiuddin and others.

PROSUN-SHUVU AND ACTION Nothing can go wrong

Arefin Shuvo is coming back with more action for the big screen, and this time around, Prosun Azad will be seen by his side in Zayed Rezwani's first movie "Mrittupuri," and the recently released trailer hints that it has good potential.

Although the shoot was scheduled to start back in 2014, they had to postpone due to visa complications, but it finally started late last year. The trailer has been well made as it gives away nothing of the original story, and focuses on the central characters. Stuntman Igor Breakenback has been included to choreograph the action sequence, who has worked as a stuntman in Hollywood films like "Superman Returns." Being produced under the banner of Baz Films, the release date for the movie is set to be announced soon, so keep your eyes out for this one. It has potential to be a good one.

Shaan to collaborate with RUPANKAR BAGCHI

With credit to numerous mixed albums under his belt, Rupankar Bagchi has earned fame in both sides of Bengal. This time around, Bagchi will be collaborating with popular Bangladeshi singer Shaan. Following Shaan's return from Kolkata after recording Bagchi, he commented that, "He is a talented artist and working with him was a nice experience. He has sung for the first time to my composition and I'm happy about it."

JOYA AHSAN AT THE HOSPITAL!

Joya Ahsan has been recently spotted lying helplessly at the City Hospital in Kolkata in the presence of ace actor Shashshoto Chattopadhyay. Shooting for Arindam Shil's next movie "Eagle-er Chokh", the two were seen busy in takes all day at the hospital.

Based on novelist Shirshendu Mukhopadhyay's detective character Shobor Dasgupta, "Eagle-er Chokh" is part of the series novel by the writer.

The story speaks out on the topic of carnal assault on men that is widely overlooked in society and about its impacts and negative effects on a person.

The National Award winning actress debuted in Tollywood through Arindam Shil's "Aborto" and has since acted in Indranil Roy Chowdhury's "Ekti Bangali Bhooter Goppo" and the widely controversial "Rajkahini" by Srijit Mukherjee.
