Celebrities don't impress me:

SONAM KAPOOR

Actress Sonam Kapoor, who is gearing up for the 69th Cannes Film Festival, says she doesn't get "star struck" by other celebrities at the red carpet. "It doesn't matter which part of the world you are from whether you are white, brown or black everybody is the same so I don't get star struck unless I really respect the person," Sonam said. "If I meet Barbra Streisand or someone like that then I will be star struck or else just celebrities don't impress me," she added.

The actress who has been elegantly blending the Indo-Western look at Cannes refrained from talking about her look at this year's festival. However, she said that her ensemble will have "some Indian element". This will be Sonam's sixth year at the Cannes Film Festival as the global brand ambassador of L'Oréal Paris. She will be seen walking the red carpet on May 15 and 16.
