CERAMIC SONGS OF THE SOIL

"Moving Roots" by Ashim Halder Sagar

ZAHANGIR ALOM

Talented artist Ashim Halder Sagar's third solo ceramic sculpture exhibition titled "Moving Roots" was inaugurated on May 20 at Gallery Twenty One, Dhanmondi.

The exhibition evokes a universal appeal. Sagar, with his devoted artistic pursuits and experiments, has created his own language of art over the years. The artist serenades the songs of soil and soul while mingling his artistic efforts with creating arts and sculptures.

His art practice began as a traditional ceramic artist. In 2008, while attending Raku workshops in Dhaka and Chittagong, he was exposed to this Japanese art form that has its roots in ceramics. Bringing a new aspect to his practice since then, he created unique, mechanical and self-modeled Raku and ceramic sculptures. This exploration of techniques and use of China clay was to create non-functional and experimental pieces that trace our elementary needs, common crisis circling contemporary life, ecology, environment, climatic change and global terrorism.

Aside from everyday use, Raku has become popular for its aesthetic value both in the East and the West.

Sagar envisages the affluence of nature in close harmony with living beings, and at the same time, he expects human beings' sensible approach to nature. Thus, following the artistic contemplations and efforts, he creates pieces of art and sculptures that are suggestive of human beings' close affinity and co-existence with nature.

In his third solo exhibition, the artist has depicted some ceramics sculptures assimilating portraits of a female and a child alongside his own one, with the elements of nature like flowers, birds, saplings, plants and branches of trees. The colours and composition coupled with the textures formed on the surface of the works are scintillating. His love for flowers and birds unequivocally demonstrates his utter passion of Bangladeshi folk arts.

The artist is greatly motivated by the saying -- "Know Thyself". He frequently questions who he is and what message he wants to relay through his arts. The outcome of his thoughts sometimes helps him develop his works anew. He follows different art media such as installation, performance and digital video to express his feelings. His sculptures entail a powerful combination of avant-garde, surrealistic and classic forms.

Sagar was placed first, securing first class in both his BFA (Honours) and MFA from the Department of Ceramics, FFA, University of Dhaka. He has participated in many group art exhibits, workshops and residencies both at home and abroad. He was the youngest Bangladeshi artist at the 14th Asian Art Biennale where he presented an installation with his short film "Dhopa".

Swiss Embassy launches photography contest

A CORRESPONDENT

The Embassy of Switzerland has launched a photography competition for young and aspiring Bangladeshi photographers from around the country, titled "Focus on Culture". Top ten winners of the contest will have the opportunity to participate in a three-day photography workshop in September conducted by leading Bangladeshi photographer GMB Akash, followed by an opportunity to show their work at a public exhibition in Dhaka.

This competition, organised by the Swiss Agency for Development and Cooperation SDC, was launched on May 26 by the Ambassador of Switzerland to Bangladesh Mr. Christian Fotsch. "Photography is a powerful media for expression and to reflect on the society around us," the ambassador said during the launch.

"This competition will provide young and passionate Bangladeshi photographers an opportunity to improve their skills and a platform to express themselves through lens."

A six-member jury panel comprising international and local photographers and experts will evaluate the entries and determine the finalists. The main objectives of the competition are to promote the young Bangladeshi photographers and hone their photographic skills.

Interested contestants can visit the web site focusonculture.net for more information and to electronically submit their entries. The entries must focus on the following themes: the role of culture (art) in society, and/or intercultural realities and cultural encounters in Bangladesh. APOCALYPSE IN DHAKA

Latest X-Men film releases at Cineplex

FAHMIM FERDous

Superhero films are all the rave these days, particularly with the battle between the DC and Marvel Cinematic Universe franchises piling up massive numbers in box offices all across the world. This year has been a particularly busy for fans of comic-book superhero films, and the latest in that line -- the oldest of the running superhero franchises, X-Men, has just arrived in Dhaka. Bryan Singer's "X-Men: Apocalypse", the ninth film of 20th Century Fox films based on the Marvel Comics, released in Dhaka yesterday, simultaneously with its US release, at the capital's Star Cineplex. The 3D film premiered to a packed house on Thursday.

"X-Men" films have always had a complicated timeline, constantly going back and forth. "Apocalypse", the sequel to the last release "Days of Future Past", brings back a number of familiar characters, while rebooting and introducing a few new ones. James McAvoy, Michael Fassbender, Jennifer Lawrence, Nicholas Hoult and Lucas Till return as Charles Xavier/Professor X, Erik Lehnsherr/Magneto, Raven/Mystique, Hank McCoy/Beast and Alec Summers/Havok respectively. Evan Peters reprises his role of Quicksilver from "Days of Future Past", while Tye Sheridan, Kodi-Smit-McPhee, Sophie Turner and Alexandra Shipp assume the roles of young Cyclops, Nightcrawler, Jean Grey and Storm. The new characters are Oscar Isaac as the titular antagonist Apocalypse, Olivia Munn as Psylocke and Ben Hardy as Angel. Hugh Jackman appears only in a glimpse, in a cameo of his iconic character of Wolverine.

Without giving away any spoilers, the film shows a young group of mutants faced against a resurrected Apocalypse -- the first mutant from tens of thousands of years ago -- and his four accomplices, dubbed the Four Horsemen. As their leader Professor X is kidnapped, the mutants must gather all their might to stop Apocalypse from wiping the earth and starting a new 'civilization'. Although there have been some negative reviews early on in its release, loyalists of the franchise will have a lot to be excited about, particularly for watching it in 3D on the big screen.
