AMY SCHUMER scraps gun scene after Orlando shooting

"Trainwreck" actress Amy Schumer has decided to cut a gun violence scene from her new movie in the aftermath of deadly shooting in Orlando nightclub. A scene showing someone shooting a gun at people has been axed from the mother-daughter comedy which is yet to be titled. Schumer stars in the feature film along with Goldie Hawn and Tom Bateman. They are filming the movie in Hawaii. Fox has announced to release the big screen project for a Mother's Day weekend release on May 12, 2017. Last year, gun violence happened in a Louisiana theatre during a showing of Schumer's movie "Trainwreck". "I wish I never wrote that movie. It's like when The Dark Knight shooting happened, and in Paris. The idea of people trying to go out and have a good time - you know, like looking forward to it? - I don't know why that makes me the saddest," she had said. In October 2015, Schumer joined her cousin, Sen. Chuck Schumer, to raise awareness on gun violence.

MAKING A MURDERER creators team with George Clooney for TV project

Hollywood superstar George Clooney and Grant Heslov's Smokehouse Pictures is teaming with the creators of "Making a Murderer" for a newly scripted TV project.

"America's Most Admired Lawbreaker", based on the series of articles by journalist Steven Brill, is the first project for Smokehouse under the company's new first-look deal with Sonar Entertainment. "Making a Murderer" creators Laura Ricciardi and Moira Demos will adapt the series with Nicki Paluga, with the duo also set to direct.

Lawbreaker is the true story of a venerable pharmaceutical company that created a powerful drug and marketed it aggressively to children and the elderly while allegedly manipulating and hiding data about its side effects.

The drug company was investigated and agreed to pay more than USD 2 billion in penalties and settlements but made a reported USD 30 billion in sales of the drug worldwide.
