MOHIT CHAUHAN Suffers Breach of Contract

Celebrated playback singer Mohit Chauhan has been accused by a US based event-management company for breach of contract. The company, ProMarcom Inc. has allegedly asked for half a million US dollar from the singer as a compensation for cancelling concerts three times.

An official of ProMarcom revealed that the first time the concert, which was scheduled in June 2015, was postponed by Mohit was because he did not have a band at that time, which he did not mention to the event-management during signing of the contract. Eventually, the show got postponed to September, and again had to re-schedule to November due to various reasons.

Mohit's lawyers are claiming that the allegations are false and that these have been made with the intention of damaging the image of the popular singer.
