

Epic burger battles

Burgers are in! But when were they 'out' though? Nevertheless, given that Dhaka today has a myriad range of some fantastic burgers and burger places than ever before, the 'burger fever' is indeed at its peak. At the Star LS headquarters, we take our burgers very seriously. Some people like skyscraper inspired burgers whereas others prefer the traditional with tons of modern add-ons. So, we went on a burger-spree and selected the best in town and put them in competition with each other.

Read on for the epic burger battles and be sure to watch the entire video of the Burger Battle!

Burger royale

I fancy myself as a 'serious' foodie; a professional one, to be very honest. I am not just a guy with a legendary appetite - which I am - but I understand food too. It's my forte.

Forgive me if I sound arrogant. I am, in fact, a harmless, down-to-earth man - but with a Pokémon Go level madness when it comes to food. So, it's no surprise that random people at the office walk up to me and ask for my 'reco'. Where to go for fine-dining? Best places for kebabs? What's new in town? At first I thought it was because of my protruding potbelly and my (slightly) chubby appearance that people just assumed my love for food.

But eventually, I found out that this is just one of the many reasons.

People trust my culinary judgments and instincts. So, I accepted and moved on. It's like a social service render, I say to myself.

Look, if you need fashion advice, I am not the person to talk to. If I ever give financial guidance, you would probably go bankrupt in 24 hours. And my friends never call me when their relationships are in turmoil, either.

But darn it, I can eat! And I know what I know and I know when to keep shut.

In such a smooth flow of events that I call life, came a colleague the other week in the cafeteria to disturb my peace.

It was lunchtime and I was minding my own business - nonchalantly eating one of my favourite burgers - when