I'm happy today because...

Are you happy? Are you content or happy? Do you know the difference between content and happy? If you can perceive the difference, how much does the distinction matter?

Do you feel there's too much emphasis on measuring happiness? Do you feel happiness can actually be measured? Do you think it's fair to compare your happiness to mine?

How about we don't overthink this happiness business? How about we focus on individual happiness but in the process, not block someone else's? Are you happy today?

APP REVIEW

RUMMAN R KALAM

Platform: Android

Speedy Car is basically a Crossy Road clone except you drive a car. Your objective is to cross intersections and railways as quickly as possible. The game may seem uber simple but it's one of those tappy games that are easy to play but difficult to master. You start off with a classic, open-top convertible. The iconic red Caprice is quite fun to play with and upgrade but once you get bored, there are even more iconic cars like the Speed Racer (Speedy Racer) or the Racer X. It goes all the way up to Mr. Bean's classic armchair Mini Cooper. The game is built to be a time waster and it does that perfectly when you keep trying to best your top score and getting the all the upgrades. No in-app purchases either.
