Objective journalism can bring progressive changes to society

Speakers tell Duja seminar

DU CORRESPONDENT

Ensuring objectivity in journalism in a country can bring progressive changes to the society, thus preserving public interests, speakers said yesterday.

They said this at a seminar "Journalistic Objectivity: A Bangladesh Context" held by Dhaka University Journalists' Association (Duja) at the university's senate building. Chief Information Commissioner Prof Dr Golam Rahman inaugurated the seminar chaired by Duja President Asifur Rahman.

Prof Dr AJM Shafiqul Alam Bhuiyan in his keynote paper said there are many impediments to ensuring balance and impartiality in journalism in Bangladesh, including manipulative tendencies and political biases.

On the other hand, privately-run media attempts to protect their business interests and those of their clients, as advertisements are the primary source of their incomes, he mentioned, adding, "Our political parties and ruling elites are yet to learn to accept criticism." Both the government and corporations need to stay away from intervening in the media so that it can work freely, Bhuiyan stressed.

Addressing the seminar as its chief guest, Dhaka University (DU) Vice Chancellor Prof AAMS Arefin Siddique said keeping media objective will benefit the country more.

He added that journalists should remain free from being influenced by others including political parties. Thus people will get objective news.

Prof Mofijur Rahman, chairman of DU mass communication and journalism department, also spoke.

The Association's newly formed committee was accorded a reception in the programme.

DHAKA CITY CORPORATIONS
Secondary garbage transfer stations draw mixed reactions

UNB, Dhaka

The move taken by two Dhaka city corporations to set up garbage sheds -- secondary transfer stations (STSs) -- in different areas for effective waste disposal filters owing to difficulties in land acquisition and apathy of the city dwellers.

The situation is the worst in the case of Dhaka South City Corporation (DSCC), as it has so far been able to set up only one STS.

During spot visits, it was found that the construction of 13 more STSs was underway in the southern part of DSCC though it planned to build 57 garbage sheds, one for each ward.

But, Dhaka North City Corporation (DNCC) has planned to build at least two or three sheds in each of its 36 wards. Of that, it has hitherto installed 39 sheds, while the construction work of nine more is going on.

The city corporations' officials claimed that the desired number of STSs expected to streamline the waste management to a large extent could not be set up since the residents are unwilling to have garbage stations fearing the spread of malodour.

But, both the residents and cleaners have welcomed the move in those areas where the garbage collection sheds are already in place, recognising improvement in waste management.

However, during the visits, quite different scenarios were found in the places where the STSs have been built and where are yet to be installed.

A few months back, a considerable portion of the street near Kalyanpur Bus Stand used to remain occupied with household wastes, but the situation near the bus stand is now totally different as a STS has been installed there.

"After the construction of the STS, we're comfortably discharging our duties. Earlier, we had to collect wastes from streets, which was a very risky task due to vehicular movement," Kamal Hossain, a cleaning staff, told the news agency.

Shawkat Hossain, a businessman who lives in Kalyanpur, said, "There's no malodour in the bus stand area any more as wastes are being dropped at the secondary transfer station."

But the case is different on Ring Road in Shyamoli. Household wastes are dumped through vans occupying half of the streets. Those cross the area either on foot or vehicle are seen covering their noses with handkerchiefs.

DNCC officials said they are constructing a STS on 21/A Ring Road for Ward 29 to drop primary wastes there.

Contacted, DSCC's Chief Waste Management Officer MK Bakhtiar said it is a very complicated job to build STS in the city corporation for a lack of space. The city corporation is facing various problems to build them even on its own lands. "There is an acute shortage of suitable land for building transfer stations. If the corporation can manage a land, then it faces protest from locals as they are worried about possible malodour, the official added.

He said, "The Dhaka University authorities had allocated a piece of land to build a transfer station. But they obstructed us when we took steps to start its construction. Later, we had a meeting with the university authorities. Now, they've agreed to give a land in another place for it."

DNCC Chief Waste Management Officer Abdur Razzak said the corporation failed to build any STS in five wards due to a lack of land, adding that they are now holding meetings with different stakeholders to take lands on lease to build the transfer stations.

HC still to rehear

Mufti Shahidul Islam, and engineer Monjurul Ahsan Munshi, said the ACC lawyer.

He said the SC first scrapped the acquittal of Iqbal Hasan Mahmud Tuku and sent his appeal to the HC for rehearing on January 27, 2014. Then the apex court passed similar orders about other accused on different days, he added.

Of the accused, Maya, Huda, Tuku, Munshi, Hafiz, Nsiruddin and Helal filed separate petitions with the SC seeking a review of its orders that scrapped their acquittals, but the apex court dismissed their review petitions, ACC counsel Khurshid Alam said.
