

RANGPUR MEDICAL COLLEGE HOSPITAL

Patients suffer for strike

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Dinajpur

An indefinite strike prompted by a clash between two groups of interns has been causing immense suffering for hundreds of patients at Rangpur Medical College Hospital (RMCH) for the last two days.

The groups sat in mediation with RMCH acting director Abu Taher Md Anwarul Haque

Pramanik yesterday noon and again engaged in a clash right after coming out. The groups, one led by Mahfuzur Haque Rakib and another by Forhad Hossain, blamed each other for starting the clash and chasing each other with sharp weapons. It erupted following an altercation in Dr Milon Dormitory on Tuesday around 11:00pm, leaving five persons injured, said the sources.

Baloch facing atrocities like '71

He said Bangladesh and India should support an independent Balochistan in order to eradicate the threat of war.

"We also want your country, Bangladesh, to support us diplomatically in the United Nations to give us voice and the United Nations to support the Baloch to blame those officials and army generals who have committed crimes against Baloch and genocide to face justice for the crimes they have committed against our people," he said.

It is time for the United Nations and the international community to declare Pakistan as a terrorist state and recognise Balochistan as occupied land," he added.

"Pakistan's rule over Balochistan has never been legitimate. It has no moral authority and it has lost control almost all over Balochistan."

Mengal, who lives in France, said unfortunately the aim was same like it was in Bangladesh 25-30 years ago. They have been killing the Baloch for more than 70 years with the same goal, he said. "The factors and actors are the same. The state... are using the actors there to occupy our land, eliminate us and suppress us."

Expressing his frustration over the lack of international recognition of genocide committed during the 1971 Liberation War, Dhaka University's Prof Delwar said, "We're trying to make the world understand the killing and violence perpetrated by Pakistani forces, Razakars, Al-Badr and Al-Shams. It is a case of genocide."

DU teachers Prof Ashfaq Hossain and Sheikh Shams Morsalin also spoke at the seminar, moderated by Iynul Islam.

45yrs of searching for

Military jeeps started roaming the campus streets breaking the silence of curfew, Champa said, adding the gunshots were so deafening as if shot just near their house.

"We passed the night awake."

At midnight, a Bengali EPR (East Pakistan Rifles) soldier appeared at their window. He had a bullet injury. Sukharanjan gave him water and tied his wound with cloth. The soldier went away before daybreak. "This remained a secret until I revealed it after independence," she said.

At 9:30am on April 14, 1971, a Pakistani military vehicle was parked near the Block-69 building. Some non-Bengali people (Urdu speaking and Muslim) camped there the day before, including one Motiur Rahman. The block was just in front of Block-71 where the Somaddars lived.

Champa said the Pakistani soldiers shook hands with the non-Bengalis and raided Somaddar's building looking for the injured EPR soldier. Five of them searched Somaddar's flat. Finding none, they went back to the vehicle. Then Motiur came out and called them back and pointed at Sukharanjan and said, "Ye Hindu hai (He is a Hindu)", Champa recalled. The Pakistani troops then marched back to their flat and picked up Sukharanjan. He was never to be seen again.

Motiur, then chairman of the psychology department, and Ahmed Muhammad Patel, a teacher of geography, accompanied the Pakistani military who took away Sukharanjan in the vehicle.

"I ran to the Bihari families (of Block-69) crying. They assured me nothing would happen as Motiur and Patel were with him," said Champa.

On that evening, Patel told Champa that she had nothing to worry as Sukharanjan was with Motiur and the then vice chancellor, Sayed Sajjad Hossain, at the guest house (now Juberi Bhaban).

Champa heard no more about her husband.

It was only after independence that she knew Sukharanjan was shot dead near a pond in Kajla area on the afternoon of that very day he was picked up. Locals buried him the next day. But the RU authority later, on February 25, 1972, reburied him in front of the central library on the campus.

"He had no reason to be killed," Champ said, in tears. "But I heard Motiur identifying him as Hindu."

The Samaddars were lucky to get his body back. Mathematics teacher Habibur Rahman, picked up on April 13, for hoisting the independent Bangladesh's flag at his home, remained untraced.

A third martyred intellectual of RU was Mir Abdul Quayum, whose family believes that Motiur had a hand in his killing as well.

Both Motiur and Patel went to Pakistan, the family said.
