TATEE GHAR

Blood red Katan wrapped around a beautiful bride or the burly wood cotton sari worn by the village belle – whichever looks more tempting, the hind-story of handloom or 'Taant' remains the same in both cases. Hand woven saris have many stories of genuine emotions to narrate - sorrow, pain and warmth of the weavers. Artisans do not just weave a sari, with each piece they produce; they breathe life into their creation, crafting cherished pieces of art.
