Rescuers from DEPZ (Dhaka Export Processing Zone) fire service station went to the construction site and searched through the debris to make sure none was trapped under rubble.

Abdul Hamid, senior station officer at the fire service station, said they wound up the rescue operation around 4:00pm.

Sheikh Md Abdullah, a director of the factory, said they were probing the incident. Action would be taken against the contractor if any negligence in the construction work was found responsible for the accident, he added.

Workers said contractor Sirazul Islam fled the site soon after the accident. This correspondent could not reach the contractor as his phone was switched off.

Ashulia police sent the three bodies to Dhaka Medical College Hospital for autopsies. Top officials of Dhaka district police visited the spot.

2014 POLLS

AL, BNP to observe Jan 5 differently

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

A day after the BNP announced a rally to protest against the January 5, 2014 national elections, the ruling Awami League yesterday declared that it will demonstrate on the election day to mark "the victory of democracy".

The BNP deems the election day to be "a black day when democracy was killed". It has already sought permission from the authorities for holding a rally in protest on January 7 at Suhrawardy Udyan in the capital.

The ruling party, however, has drawn a chart of programmes including demonstrations at two places in Dhaka to celebrate the third anniversary of the elections.

One rally will be held at Russel Square of Dhanmondi and the other near the party's Bangabandhu Avenue office, AL Joint General Secretary Mahbubul Haque Hanif told The Daily Star.

At a meeting of the ruling party and its front organisations, they decided to organise similar programmes at district- and upazila-levels as well.

"January 5 heralds the continuation of democracy in Bangladesh," Hanif said after the meeting.

Since the one-sided general elections, the opposition BNP has been observing the day every year as a black day.

On Wednesday, its Joint Secretary General Rizvi Ahmed announced that the party would hold several programmes this time including processions, in which party members and leaders would wear black badges and carry black flags.

Trump has captured the Chinese imagination, and riled its authorities, with his threats to talk turkey about massive tariffs on Chinese exports.

With his crowing tweets on Twitter, including attacks on China's foreign and economic policy, it is no surprise that the Chinese internet wants to give the strutting American leader the bird.

Earlier in the year, Chinese state media circulated a photo of a rooster with a feathery, golden mane that recalled Trump's infamous crest.

Returning Officer Rabbi Mia with the consent of the contenders arranged the lottery at his office yesterday, under section 41 (6) of district election conducting rules.

Luck favoured Faruk as he won the lottery.

After the lottery, Iqbal said, "Voters showed respect to me but luck just did not favour me. However, I will extend cooperation to the winner."

Faruk said, "I did not win the election; it was Iqbal who made me the winner. I will work in cooperation with him."

Obama hits Russia

material support to the GRU's operations; and two Russian individuals for using cyber-enabled means to cause misappropriation of funds and personal identifying information.

Obama also said in the statement announcing that the diplomats have been ordered to leave the country, that those individuals and their families were given 72 hours to leave the United States.

"These actions follow repeated private and public warnings that we have issued to the Russian government, and are a necessary and appropriate response to efforts to harm U.S. interests in violation of established international norms of behavior," Obama said in the statement.

President-elect Donald Trump said Wednesday that Americans should "get on with our lives" when he was asked about the expected White House announcement to place sanctions on Russia.

"I think we ought to get on with our lives," he told reporters Wednesday night at the Mar-a-Lago in West Palm Beach, Florida. "I think that computers have complicated lives very greatly. The whole age of computer has made it where nobody knows exactly what is going on. We have speed, we have a lot of other things, but I'm not sure we have the kind, the security we need."

Trump's statement splits with Republican leaders on Capitol Hill.

House Speaker Paul Ryan, a Republican, called the sanctions "overdue," adding that it is an "appropriate way to end eight years of failed policy with Russia."

"Russia does not share America's interests," he said in a statement Thursday. "In fact, it has consistently sought to undermine them, sowing dangerous instability around the world. While today's action by the administration is overdue, it is an appropriate way to end eight years of failed policy with Russia. And it serves as a prime example of this administration's ineffective foreign policy that has left America weaker in the eyes of the world."

Girls outshine boys

Schools across the country had a festive look yesterday. Students got their results from their schools, websites and through text messages.

GIRLS OUTSHINE BOYS

A total of 15,40,439 girls and 12,90,295 boys took the primary terminal exams this year. The pass rates of girls and boys are 98.56 and 98.44 percent.

When it comes to the highest achievement, 25,674 more girls achieved GPA-5 than boys.

A similar picture is there in JSC exam results.

A total of 10,61,362 girls and 9,31,954 boys took the tests and their success rates are 92.96 and 92.80 percent.

As many as 1,34,388 girls got GPA-5 against 1,00,671 boys.

"Education plays the pivotal role in women empowerment and results of girls make us optimistic," said Education Minister Nurul Islam Nahid.

Pointing out the reasons, noted educationist Rasheda K Choudhury said girls do well as they are more attentive to their studies.

"Apart from the fact that girls spend more time at home than boys, they are more interested in education."

Girls get stipends and other facilities from the government, which encourage them to be more sincere in studies. Besides, they need to meet some criteria to get stipends, Rasheda said.

It is worrying that the drop-out rates of girls increase in higher classes, she said. "This is where the government needs to look into."

PRIMARY TERMINAL EXAMS

This year, some 29.34 lakh class-V students had registered for the exams conducted by the Directorate of Primary Education. Of them, 28.30 lakh took the tests of six subjects from November 20. Students must pass all the exams to enrol in class-VI.

Except 42,302 students, others passed the exams.

Officials and teachers attributed combined effort of all to the success. They said better care of students by teachers and guardians, and awareness among them of rising competitiveness played a significant role.

primary and mass education ministry, students did well in all six subjects, especially in English and mathematics.

The pass rate in English was 99.27 percent and in mathematics 99.33 percent.

Primary and Mass Education Minister Mostafizur Rahman announced the results formally at a crowded press conference around 1:00pm at his secretariat office in the capital.

Asked if teachers had been instructed to give pass marks, he said, "There were no such instructions.... In my three-year tenure, I didn't give any instruction to increase marks."

"The results were not fabricated."

Barisal topped the list of seven divisions, with 99.09 percent success rate while Sylhet remained at the bottom with 97.25 percent pass rate.

Like previous years, Munshiganj ranked first among all districts.

More than 95 percent of 4,332 children with special needs, who participated in the exams, passed.

Asked why government schools were lagging behind, the primary education minister said many public schools suffered a shortage of teachers. The ministry would try to appoint teachers to vacant positions next year, he added.

Rasheda K Choudhury stressed the need for more efforts to help students become more competent in all subjects.

Syria ceasefire agreed

"Several hours ago, the event occurred that we have not only been waiting for but been working so much to hasten," Putin said in a meeting with his defence and foreign ministers.

After the Kremlin announcement, Syria's army said it would halt all military operations from midnight, and the opposition National Coalition also said it backed the truce.

Putin also said he would reduce Moscow's military contingent in Syria, which has been flying a bombing campaign in support of President Bashar al-Assad since last year.

The Kremlin strongman, however, said that Russia would continue to fight "terrorism" in the war-torn country and maintain its support for the government in Damascus.

Russian Defence Minister Sergei Shoigu said that the seven opposition groups, including the powerful Ahrar al-Sham, that have signed up to the agreements after months of talks comprise some 62,000 fighters and control a large portion of territory in central and northern Syria.

He warned that any groups that did not abide by the ceasefire would be considered "terrorists" alongside the Islamic State group and the former al-Qaeda affiliate previously known as Al-Nusra Front, now rebranded the Fateh al-Sham Front.

Putin's announcement of the deal came hours after Turkey's foreign minister said the potential truce could start by New Year.

The nationwide ceasefire follows the deal brokered by Turkey and Russia for Aleppo which allowed the evacuation of tens of thousands of civilians.

ASTANA TALKS

Moscow and Ankara are now pushing for peace talks between Damascus and the rebels to start soon in the capital of Kazakhstan, Astana.

"Now we need to do everything for these agreements to come into force, for them to work, so that the negotiating teams that have been or are being formed promptly and as soon as possible arrive in Astana," Putin said.

Russia and Turkey have both said that the peace talks they will supervise are meant to supplement UN-backed peace efforts, rather than replace them entirely.

Russian Foreign Minister Sergei Lavrov said that Russia, Turkey and Iran were currently organising for the talks to begin in Astana and pressing for other key international players to get involved.

Lavrov said Moscow would invite Egypt before trying to attract other regional powers such as Saudi Arabia, Qatar, Iraq and Jordan.

In a clear snub to US President Barack Obama, Russia's top diplomat said Moscow would look to get the team of President-elect Donald Trump in the mix when he takes power next month.

FIGHTING CONTINUES

As its cooperation tightened with Moscow, Turkey stood conspicuously quiet as the regime, supported by Russia, took control last week of Aleppo, handing the rebels their biggest defeat in the civil war so far.

The victory was also a boost for Putin, who sent forces to Syria last year to bolster Assad in an unprecedented intervention.

Syria's conflict began with a 2011 uprising against Assad but quickly morphed into a complicated civil war that has now killed more than 310,000 people and forced millions more from their homes.

The conflict continued to rage as civilians were killed in regime strikes yesterday, the UK-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights told AFP in Beirut.

The observatory said at least 15 civilians, including six children, were killed yesterday in air strikes and artillery fire on rebel-held territory near Syria's capital Damascus.

Israel's right wing bins

Religious nationalists such as Bennett who see the West Bank as part of Israel, pointing to the Jewish connection to the land from the biblical era, hold heavy sway in Netanyahu's government.

Netanyahu hit back immediately following Kerry's speech, calling it biased against Israel and more focused on settlements than Palestinian violence.

He has lashed out at US President Barack Obama and Kerry in particularly harsh language, blaming them for orchestrating last week's UN Security Council resolution demanding a halt to settlement building.

The United States abstained from the vote in a rare move, with the resolution passing 14-0.

RADICAL SHIFT

"Israelis do not need to be lectured about the importance of peace by foreign leaders," Netanyahu said on Wednesday night.

After Trump tweeted ahead of Kerry's speech "Stay strong Israel, January 20th is fast approaching!" Netanyahu responded with a tweet of his own.

"President-elect Trump, thank you for your warm friendship and your clear-cut support for Israel!" he wrote.

While Kerry's speech broke little new ground, it included unusually stern criticism of Israel from an American leader.

"The Israeli prime minister publicly supports a two-state solution, but his current coalition is the most right-wing in Israeli history, with an agenda driven by the most extreme elements," he said.

He added later that "the settler agenda is defining the future in Israel. And their stated purpose is clear: They believe in one state: greater Israel."

IN LOVING MEMORY

Today is the sixth death anniversary of Dr. Bazlul Mobin Chowdhury. Professor Chowdhury was a prominent educationist who was the first Vice Chancellor of Independent University, Bangladesh (IUB).

In Loving Memory of our Bapu
Dr. Bazlul Mobin Chowdhury
(1941-2010)

This poem "Always by my side" has been written by his youngest daughter.

Always by my side
Kishwar M Chowdhury

When you were here I never asked for answers I needed to know.
"It can wait", I'd tell myself, "I'll ask him as I grow".
But the truth is that, you yourself thought you'd always be around.
Though truth really is that we all must one day be buried in the ground
I've searched for you amidst the clouds through the windows of a plane.
My first time diving in the deep blue sea, I even searched there in vain.
"The body's gone", I told myself, but he must exist in another form
Haven't found you yet, but I can't let go or admit that I'm wrong
I've held on tight to your jacket sleeves to imagine feeling your arm,
I've even tried wearing your suits but they failed to keep me warm.
They no longer have your natural scent, you'd always smell like home,
I've felt homeless since you left, like a nomad who lives to roam.
But my heart tells me you still hear me cry, so I ask you for answers I need
On those very nights, I dream of you and the dreams restore my creed.
I see you clearly and hear your voice, we're always in a good place.
I wake up happy having met you again, the excitement makes my heart race.
But on evenings when I sit down to pray, I lose my sense of reason.
I still pray to God to give you back like he took you that cold season.
But I'm happy because you're in a better place, where all the angels are.
I'll wait to meet you in my dreams again though you may be far.
