THE FUTURE OF CINEMA

APURBA JAHANGIR

Cinema is considered to be the most important art form of this century—and to indulge into this art form, this week film enthusiasts witnessed a grand celebration. With the slogan 'Future in Frames', the Children's Film Society, a non profit organisation dedicated to inspire upcoming generations of film makers kicked off their annual flag ship event, the 10th International Children's Film Festival. Children and young adults aged 6 to 25 from all over the globe participated in this festival. To know more about this event, check out this week's spotlight on pages 8 and 9.

3 HISTORY TEACHES US NOTHING
