

GOODBYE

Wand Master

Sad news for the potter heads once again as John Hurt passes away, January 27th, following his battle with cancer. The 77 year old actor was well known for his role, Garrick Ollivander, commonly known as the wand salesman in "Harry Potter And The Philosopher's Stone". The actor is also known as John Merrick in David Lynch's biopic "The Elephant Man (1980)", as 'Richard Rich in the film "A Man for All Seasons (1966)" and the War Doctor in "Doctor Who". He was named by a number of publications as one of the most memorable in cinematic history for his character's final scene in "Alien".

The actor was also famous for his distinctive voice landing him gigs in successful movies like "The Lord of the Rings" and "Watership Down".

SANJAY LEELA BHANSALI

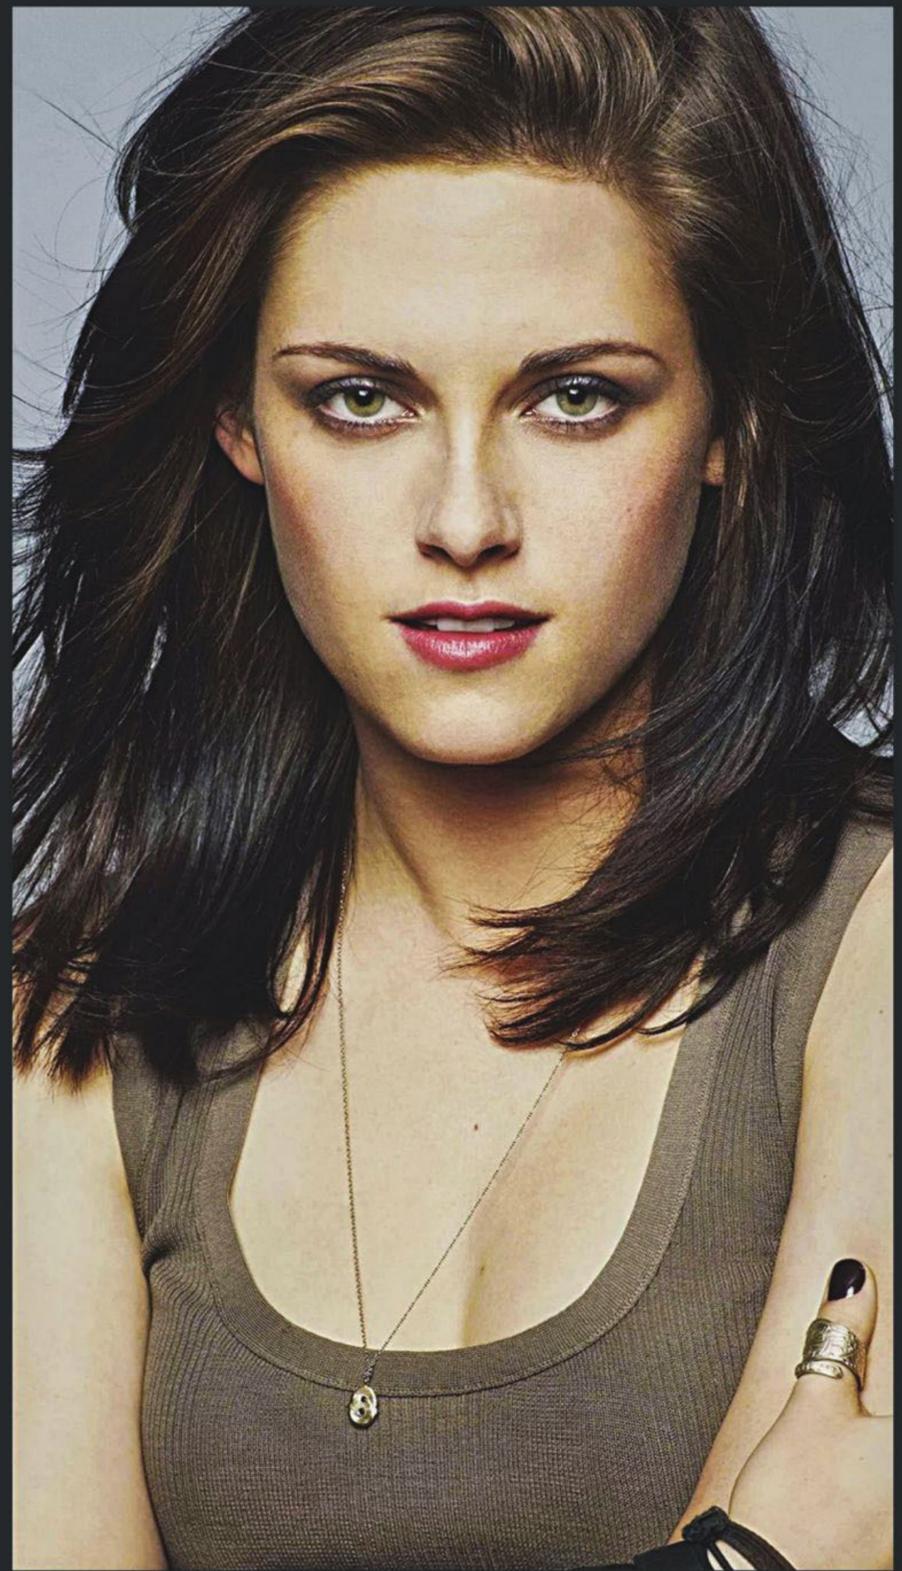

assaulted on the sets of "Padmavati"

The film fraternity is appalled by the recent attacks on the set of Sanjay Leela Bhansali's new film, "Padmavati", by activists of a Rajput organization. On Friday, the Karni Sena activists entered the Jaigarh Fort, Jaipur and assaulted Bhansali, according to the police. According to these extremists, the reason why they had to take such drastic measure was because Bhansali was apparently twisting history by making the film about the medieval-era Delhi ruler Alauddin Khilji, who fell in love with Rajput queen Padmavati. Bhansali has packed up and has said that he will never shoot in Jaipur again.

KRISTEN NOT HAPPY ABOUT TWILIGHT?

"When something's really good, it's rare – honestly, I've made a million bad movies," the 26-year old actor shared with Refinery29. "Not bad, it's just like sometimes they don't come together in a way that feels miraculous, and when they do, it genuinely feels like something is floating and you're all sorts of blowing on it to keep it up and it's like, that fully happened," the actress further added.

In the process of displaying her struggle to stardom, has Kristen circuitously admitted to "Twilight" not being her stronger movies? But isn't the "Twilight" series what made her big in the first place?
