Why so many murders?

Families of victims in BDR mutiny search for answers as they wait for justice

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

He was born 11 days after his father Maj Mominul Islam Sarker was shot dead during the BDR carnage at the border guards' headquarters in 2009.

Seeing a few pictures of his father and asking the grownups about him, Sadakat Sabri, now in grade one, has grown to be fond of the man he has never seen.

That is why when he came to mourn the deaths of the victims of the carnage at Banani graveyard for the armed forces officials yesterday, he kept telling his aunt that he wanted to be an army officer like his father.

"He cherishes his father and always dreams of becoming a heroic figure

Obama for president of France?

CNN ONLINE

Could France elect Barack Obama president? Not really -- but that's not stopping the organizers of Obama17, a guerrilla campaign trying to entice the former US president to head to Paris.

"It's totally crazy, but the cool thing is that once you get past that, you start thinking that maybe it's possible. Who cares that he's not French? He's

ROHINGYA RELOCATION

Thengar Char not suitable yet

Finds Noakhali district admin

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The government will have to build flood protection embankment, cyclone centres and necessary infrastructure and ensure supply of drinking water if it wants to relocate the Myanmar Rohingya refugees in Bangladesh to Thengar Char in Noakhali.

The recommendations were made in a report prepared by the district administration and the district forest department of Noakhali. The report was sent to the Ministry of Environment and Forests on Thursday.

The report was prepared after the ministry had directed the district administration to inform it about the present condition of the char.

Earlier this month, the Forest Department in a report opined that Thengar Char, where the government is planning
