

Giving the car a wash every second day is a must in our country. Manoeuvre the car through the bends created by the pillars in your garage and park it safely outside under the shade of a tree as it glitters in the sunlight, seeping through the leaves of the trees. Always remember to wash it under the shade because once it is dried after the wash, it will not have watermarks on it. Grab a hose pipe, bucket, car shampoo and sponge. Gently spraying water, softly sponge the car with a blob of shampoo. When washing the wiper blade, check if its rubber is in good condition and hasn't corroded. Once you're done shampooing your car and the car has dried, apply car wax and buff it well for extra shine.

Engine oil should be checked every week before starting the car. Bonus tip: If you are driving an auto car, gear oil must be checked with the car turned on.

Make sure that the radiator coolant is always topped up and when putting in Mobil oil, make sure that it is of the right viscosity. How many times should you change it? It is recommended that you do it every 5000-6000 km.

Tyre pressure should be checked every 2-3 days and must be maintained according to the specification written on the sides of the door of the car. You must also make sure that wheel alignment is checked every six months and if you are fixing a new tyre, make sure the wheel is properly balanced.

Last but not the least, give some attention to the lights of the car since without them, you're blind. Headlights and back lights should be checked, especially before you leave for a long journey.

After all the sweat and toil, the shining and tuning are done and your new buy is ready to take to the road making you feel proud and accomplished.
