The trucker killed her

Over 13 years after the incident, a Dhaka court on Monday sentenced Mir Hossen to death.

Protesting the verdict, transport workers called a country-wide strike on Tuesday, which was withdrawn yesterday.

During a visit to the area yesterday, this correspondent talked to several people including Khodeza's family members, witness, and the relatives of the death convict truck driver.

"There had been regular altercations between Mir Hossen and Khodeza's husband over driving the truck through the road. The earthen road was a part of his (Khodeza's husband) property, which he let others use," said Kashmir Begum of the area, also a witness. "At one stage, Mir Hossen out of anger ran the truck over Khodeza and killed her."

Expressing satisfaction over the verdict, Khodeza's husband urged the government to execute the penalty immediately. "Although it took almost 13 years, we are happy that justice has been served."

The transport strike is not justified, said Nuru Gazi, adding, "It was a murder, not an accident because he (Mir Hossen) intentionally killed my wife after the altercation."

Khodeza's youngest son Anower Hossen, 24, said, "I won't get my mother back. At least, her soul will be in peace now."

Contacted, Mir Hossen's wife Halima Begum said, "It was an accident, we will appeal to the high court against the verdict."

Meanwhile, some people, including transport workers, in the Jhauchar area are continuing their protest against the verdict.
