

Displaced Iraqi women, who fled their homes during a battle between Iraqi forces and Islamic State militants, carry their children in Mosul, Iraq, yesterday.

PHOTO: REUTERS

Scottish vote likely in 'autumn 2018' AFP, Edinburgh

Scotland could hold an independence referendum in the autumn of 2018, just months before Britain is due to leave the European Union, Scottish First Minister Nicola Sturgeon told the BBC, and a second poll in a month suggested rising support for secession.

The prospect of an independence vote in Scotland that could rip apart the United Kingdom just months before an EU exit adds to the complexity of negotiations on Britain's departure from the European Union.

Scotland's threat of a second independence vote in four years also raises the pressure on Prime Minister Theresa May as she prepares to trigger formal exit negotiations with the other 27 members of the European Union over the UK's divorce terms.

Sturgeon said autumn 2018 would be a "common sense time" for Scotland to hold another independence referendum, once there is some outline of a deal to exit the European Union.

No decision has yet been taken on a vote, she added.

Up to now, most polls show support for independence in Scotland has barely shifted from around 45 percent since 2014.

However, a poll by Ipsos MORI on Thursday showed that among those likely to vote, support for independence had risen to 50 percent, a 2 percent increase in support for independence compared to Ipsos Mori's last poll.

Hawaii issues first challenge have said it might be hard to find and was challenged in more than two into effect. REUTERS, Hawaii

The state of Hawaii requested emergency court intervention on Wednesday to halt a revised executive order from President Donald Trump placing US entry restrictions on refugees and travelers from six Muslim-majority countries. Arguing that the new travel ban violates the US Constitution, the state asked a Hawaii federal court to grant a temporary restraining order that should apply nationally. U.S. District Court Judge Derrick Watson ruled earlier in the day that the state could sue over Trump's new order, which was signed by the president on Monday. It is the first legal challenge to the revised order. Watson said the state could revise its initial lawsuit, which had challenged Trump's original ban signed in January. A hearing is set for March 15, a day before the new ban is to go

The government has said the president has wide authority to implement immigration policy and that the travel rules are necessary to protect against terrorist attacks.

Some legal experts have said court

TRUMP'S NEW TRAVEL BAN

challenges will be more difficult now because changes to the order give exemptions to more people.

The revised travel order changed and replaced the original, more sweeping ban issued on Jan 27 that caused chaos and protests at airports dozen lawsuits around the country. A federal judge in Seattle put the first order on hold, in a decision upheld by an appeals court in San Francisco. The new order is much more narrowly tailored. It keeps a 90-day ban on travel to the United States by citizens of Iran, Libya, Syria, Somalia, Sudan and Yemen, but excludes Iraq and applies the restriction only to new visa applicants. It also removed an indefinite ban on all refugees from Syria. The order no longer covers legal residents or existing visa holders, and makes waivers possible for some business, diplomatic and other travelers.

Immigration advocates have said the new ban, like the original one, discriminates against Muslims.

But the first hurdle in a lawsuit is proving "standing" to sue, which means finding someone who has been harmed by the policy. With so many exemptions, legal experts individuals that a court would rule have a right to sue. Hawaii claims its state universities would be harmed by the order because they would have trouble recruiting students and faculty. It also says the island state's economy would be hit by a decline in tourism. Adam Lauridsen, a San Francisco attorney representing students challenging Trump's first order, said the waiver provisions in the new ban are similar to case-by-case exemptions allowed in the first ban. Earlier legal challenges were allowed to move forward despite those waivers, he said. In support of its actions, the Trump administration has cited a section of law that says the president can suspend entry to the United States by "any class" of foreigners if he finds it would be "detrimental to the interests" of the country.

WiKiLeaks to share CIA secret files

Assange accuses CIA of 'devastating incompetence', says hacked tools will be shared with tech giants to fix errors AFP, London

WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange yesterday accused the CIA of "devastating incompetence" for keeping hacking secrets in one place and said he would work with tech giants to develop fixes after he leaked them. "This is a historic act of devastating incompetence, to have created such an arsenal and then stored it all in one place," Assange told a press conference streamed live from Ecuador's embassy in London, where he has been living as a fugitive from justice since 2012.

"It is impossible to keep effective control of cyber weapons... If you build them, eventually you will lose them, Assange said. He said his anti-secrecy website had "a lot more information" about the Central Intelligence Agency's hacking operation but would hold off on publishing it until WikiLeaks had spoken to tech manufacturers about fixes. "We have decided to work with them to give them some exclusive access to the additional technical details we have so fixes can be developed and then pushed out. "Once this material is effectively disarmed by us we will publish additional details about what has been occurring," he added. On Tuesday, WikiLeaks published nearly 9,000 documents it said were part of a huge trove leaked from the CIA, describing it as the largest ever publication of secret intelligence materials.

"This extraordinary collection, which amounts to more than several hundred million lines of code, gives its possessor the entire hacking capacity of the CIA," it said. The documents showed that CIA hackers can turn a TV into a listening device, bypass popular encryption apps, and possibly control one's car. CIA on Wednesday accused WikiLeaks of endangering Americans, helping US rivals and hampering the fight against terror threats by releasing the alleged CIA hacking tools. A CIA spokeswoman would not confirm the authenticity of the materials published by WikiLeaks, which said they were leaked from the spy agency's hacking operations.

Most experts believe the materials to be genuine, and US media said Wednesday that the Federal Bureau of Investigation is opening a criminal probe into the leak.

The source of the materials remained unclear. The investigation could focus on whether the CIA was sloppy in its controls, or, as The Washington Post reported, it could be "a major mole hunt" for a malicious leaker or turn coat inside the agency.

WikiLeaks itself said the documents, hacking tools and code came from an archive that had circulated among US government hackers and private contractors.

An investigation would come as the CIA is already enmeshed in a politically-charged probe into Russia's alleged interference in the US election last year in support of President Donald Trump's campaign.

WikiLeaks, which has stunned the US government with a series of publications of top secret political, diplomatic and intelligence materials in recent years, said Tuesday's leak was only the first of a series of releases of CIA hacking materials.

Meanwhile, Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman Geng Shuang said China expressed concern about the reports and reiterated its opposition to all forms of hacking.

Blasts kill 26 at Iraqi wedding

SAMARRA

Two suicide bombers attacked a celebration being held the night before a wedding north of Baghdad, killing 26 people, a police officer and a doctor said yesterday.

The bombings in the Al-Hajaj area, north of the city of Tikrit, also wounded 25 people, the sources said.

"The first blew himself up at 8:30 pm (1730 GMT on Wednesday) amid men who were dancing during the celebration," while the second attacked a few minutes later, a police lieutenant colonel said.

The bombers detonated explosive belts, the officer said. A doctor at a local hospital confirmed the toll.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the attack, but the Islamic State jihadist group carries out frequent suicide bombings targeting both civilians and members of the security forces in Iraq.

IS overran large areas north and west of Baghdad, including swathes of Salaheddin province, where Wednesday's attack occurred, but Iraqi forces backed by US-led air strikes and other support have since regained most of the territory they lost.

Iraqi forces are now fighting to retake west Mosul, the largest urban bastion still held by the jihadists in Iraq.

Troops battled the ultra-hardline Sunni Muslim fighters, who hid among the remaining civilian population and deployed snipers and suicide car bombs to defend their last major Iraq stronghold.

Students of Rabindra Bharati University blow colour powder during Holi, the Festival of Colours, celebrations inside the university campus in Kolkata, India, yesterday.

REUTERS

Stop Nazi references

Merkel tells Turkey; Ankara repeats comparison

REUTERS, Berlin

German Chancellor Angela Merkel told Turkey to stop using Nazi references in an escalating row between the Nato allies over the cancellation of Turkish ministers' rallies in Germany, only for the Turkish foreign minister to repeat the same comparison.

Turkey is fuming that some German authorities, citing security concerns, have campaigning among Germany's large Turkish community for President Tayyip Erdogan's bid to boost his powers in a referendum on stopped its ministers from April 16. Berlin, meanwhile, is angry about the arrest of a Turkish-

German journalist in Istanbul held on terrorism charges and has repeatedly called for his release.

Merkel spoke unusually bluntly in the Bundestag lower house of parliament, saying causes, such as fighting Islamist terrorism.

she was saddened by the deep differences which were dividing the allies despite common "These comparisons of Germany with Nazism must stop. They are unworthy of the close ties between Germany and Turkey and of our peoples," the centre-right chancellor said.

However, Turkey's Foreign Minister effectively repeated the comparison within hours, saying that he was not calling the current German government Nazis but that their actions were reminiscent of that era. On Sunday, Erdogan described the cancel lations as "fascist actions" reminiscent of the Nazi era.

> Merkel stressed that while she was open to dialogue with Turkey, an aspiring member of the European Union, but any talks had to be based on democratic values.

She said that the roughly 3 million people with Turkish ties living in Germany were part of German society, but she warned that domestic conflicts should not spill over into Germany.

Bilateral ties have deteriorated significantly in the last year over a series of rows, from a legal case over a German comedian who poked fun at Erdogan to a parliamentary vote calling the 1915 massacre of Armenians by Ottoman forces "genocide".

Israel MPs nod to bills quieting mosques

AFP, Jerusalem

Israel's parliament gave preliminary approval Wednesday to two controversial measures that would limit calls to prayers from mosques, including one prohibiting the use of loudspeakers at all hours, after shouting matches between lawmak-

The bills -- the second of which would ban loudspeakers in urban areas between 11:00 pm and 7:00 am -- will eventually have to be reconciled, with three more readings required before they can become law.

While the bills in theory would apply to any religious place of worship, Muslims say it is clearly meant to silence the traditional call to prayer at mosques.

23 killed in air strikes US confirms Marines deployed in anti-IS ops

AGENCIES

The toll in air strikes thought to have been conducted by a US-led coalition on a jihadist-held northern Syrian village yesterday has risen to 23 civilians killed, a monitor said. "The raids hit the village of Al-Matab after midnight and were likely carried out by the coalition," said Rami Abdel Rahman of the Syrian Observatory for Human Rights. The Observatory earlier reported a toll of 14 people killed. At least eight children and six women were among State group.

The village lies near a key road linking Raqa -- IS's de facto capital -- to Deir Ezzor city, the capital of the adjacent oil-rich province. On Monday, fighters from the US-backed Syrian Democratic Forces cut off that route in a bid to encircle the jihadists in Raqa.

The US-led coalition has been backing the SDF's drive for Raga with air power and hundreds of special operations forces as

Abdel Rahman said SDF fighters advancing on IS jihadists in Al-Matab, which lies about 55 kilometres (35 miles) southeast of Raga, reported AFP. Meanwhile, a US Marines artillery unit has been deployed to Syria in recent days to help local forces speed up efforts to defeat Islamic State at Raqqa and the campaign to isolate the city is going "very, very well", the US-led coalition said yes-

Coalition spokesman US Air Force Colonel John WAR IN SYRIA Dorrian said the additional US forces would be working the dead in Al-Matab, held by the Islamic with local partners in Syria - the Syrian Democratic Forces (SDF) and the Syrian Arab Coalition - and would not have a front line role, reported Reuters.

> The artillery will help "expedite the defeat of ISIS in Raqqa", he said, using another acronym for Islamic State.

> The additional deployment comprises a total of 400 US forces - both Marines and Army Rangers. It adds to around 500 US military personnel already in Syria, Dorrian said.

8,000 evacuated in German city over WWII bomb

Some 8,000 people were

AFP, Berlin

evacuated yesterday from homes, shops and offices in the western German city of Duesseldorf after an unexploded World War II bomb was uncovered, local authorities said. The 250-kilogramme (550-pound) dud explosive was found on Wednesday evening during construction works in the northern district of the city. A onekilometre radius was sealed off. The bomb expected to be defused in the early afternoon. More than 70 years after the end of the war, unexploded bombs are regularly found buried in German soil, a legacy of the Allies' intense bombing campaigns against Nazi Germany. Authorities estimate that some 3,000 unexploded bombs remain underground in Berlin alone.

'World's heaviest woman' loses 100 kgs in surgery

Indian doctors yesterday

AFP, Mumbai

said that an Egyptian who is believed to be the world's heaviest woman had successfully undergone weight-loss surgery after losing over 100 kilograms (220 pounds). Eman Ahmed Abd El Aty, who previously weighed around 500 kilos, had not left her house in Egypt in over two decades until arriving in Mumbai last month for bariatric surgery. The Egyptian is still believed to be the world's heaviest woman ahead of American Pauline Potter who the Guinness Book of World Records recorded at 293 kilos in July last year.