Sadar upazila Chairman Anwar Sadat Samrat as a special guest, said Shahnaj.

Prof Imran Rahman, vice chancellor of ULAB, will also join the session.

Dr Shahnaj said a team of General Education Department of ULAB headed by her started an archaeological excavation in Bhitargarh in 2009.

"The excavation brought to light some interesting features of post Gupta period structures at Bhitargarh. The team also found a cruciform temple of post Gupta period of 7th century AD along with other artefacts like copper and iron made objects and a black stone statue of goddess Manasa.

"The city people maintained good business relations with Mohasthanagarh city as well as different places in India, Nepal, Bhutan, China and some other South Asian countries through rivers," said Dr Shahnaj.

"Bhitargarh is on the verge of collapse, as locals are building structures within the site, violating the High Court's order imposing a suspension on all kinds of construction work in the area." CAS is trying to engage the local inhabitants with the excavation, so they become susceptible to their own heritage, she said.

constituted under the Mobile Court Act, 2009, are empowered to try a number of petty offences including illegal assembly, public nuisance and illegal connection of utility services and to supervise examination centres.

Under the mobile court law, executive magistrates can instantly punish offenders with up to two years of imprisonment and can also realise fines from them.

If an offender confesses to an offence, but fails to pay the fine instantly, the executive magistrate can hand down another three months' jail term.

The government has replied to the HC rule, saying that there is a necessity of running mobile courts by the executive magistrates to punish the offenders on the spots and to prevent the offences, Deputy Attorney General Motaher Hossain Sazu told The Daily Star yesterday.

Real estate businessman Kamruzzaman Khan, who was convicted by a mobile court, filed the writ petition on October 11, 2011, stating that those provisions of the act that empower executive magistrates to exercise judicial powers are against the fundamental structure of the constitution.

On September 14, 2011, a mobile court comprised of Rajuk's executive magistrate Shahidul Islam convicted and sentenced Kamruzzaman to 30 days' imprisonment for constructing a building at Mohammadpur in the capital without following Rajuk plan.

Kamruzzaman in his writ petition said the exercise of judicial powers by the executive magistrates also goes against the Supreme Court verdict in Masder Hossain Case, popularly known as separation of the judiciary case. He also prayed to the court that his conviction by the mobile court be declared illegal.

The HC on October 16, 2011 also stayed Kamruzzaman's conviction.
