

What if?

Every day, we find ourselves at crossroads. We ponder over our options, the roads we can take, and the consequences of each choice.

These moments of uncertainty can be about anything. But the most pivotal ones are about our careers and our relationships with people. Seldom do I see people picking the options that will make them truly happy. This past week I realised that our lives are set on a timer and that timer may stop sooner than we anticipate. So go out there, do what makes you happy without hurting anyone in the process. No person should be asking themselves in the twilight of their lives – “What if?”
