DRIVING OFFENCES

Cabinet okays tougher law

Jail, fine for driving without valid licence, using fake licence, reckless driving

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The cabinet yesterday approved a draft law requiring education up to at least eighth grade for getting driving licences, and providing for harsher punishments for offences on roads.

The law, "Road Transport Act-2017", also makes mandatory minimum fifth-grade education to work as a helper or assistant.

"Big changes have been brought into the draft law as the transport sector nowadays has become very vibrant," Cabinet Secretary Mohammad Shafiul Alam told reporters after the cabinet meeting.

Twelve-point driving licences will be issued after the law is brought into effect.

Every time a driver will violate rules like exceeding the speed limit, one point will be reduced. His licence will be cancelled for losing all the points, Shafiul Alam explained.

This new system reflects laws of different countries on issuing driving licences, he added.

As per the proposed law, the punishment for driving any vehicle without a license is maximum 6 months jail or Tk 50,000 fine or both. Earlier according to the Motor Vehicle Ordinance-1983 the punishment was three months' jail or Tk 25,000 fine or both.

The new law also incorporates provisions of punishment for using a cell phone while driving and of transport management. Severe penalties ranging from one month jail to three-month jail and Tk 5,000-Tk 35,000 fine will also be

Comilla in election mood

Candidates of city polls make last-minute campaign today; voting Thursday

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Comilla

With the Comilla city polls only a day away, around two-week electioneering will end at midnight tonight.

Candidates have launched a last-minute campaign in the city to garner support.

Restriction on outsiders staying in the city is already in force since early today. Besides, a ban will be imposed on movement of motorcycles in the city from early tomorrow.

Movement of all modes of transport will be restricted on polling day. However, vehicles with special stickers from the Election Commission and those of fire service, postal, power, water and gas supply authorities and ambulances will remain out of the purview of the ban.

The restrictions will be put in place as per electoral laws to hold the polls in a free, fair and peaceful manner, said EC officials.

Four candidates are contesting the mayoral post and 154 are running for 36 posts of ward councillors. They launched electoral campaign on March 15 after they were allocated election symbols on the same day.

The city has been in a festive mood for the last two weeks, with candidates and their supporters holding rallies, bringing out processions and going door-to-door to woo voters. They have put thousands of posters, banners and other electoral campaign materials on display in city streets.

Fresh political crisis hits Maldives

Troops evict opposition MPs from parliament

AFP, Malé

Security forces physically ejected protesting MPs from the Maldives parliament yesterday in chaotic scenes during a failed opposition attempt to impeach the speaker and destabilise the president ahead of elections next year.

Lawmakers shouted and stood on their chairs and one tried to remove the speaker's seat ahead of the impeachment vote, which came a day after exiled opposition leader

Mohamed Nasheed announced a unity pact with the president's powerful half-brother -- the former strongman Maumoon Abdul Gayoom.

Nasheed had hoped that the surprise alliance with Gayoom, who is still nominally head of the ruling party, would provide enough parliamentary support to oust the speaker, but even with that deal the opposition Maldives Democratic party
