on trade, N Korea

Jinping to do more to curb North Korea's nuclear program and help reduce the gaping US trade deficit with Beijing in talks on Friday, even as he toned down the strident anti-China rhetoric of his election campaign. Trump spoke publicly of progress on a range of issues in his first US-China summit - as did several of his top aides but they provided few concrete specifics other than China's agreement to work together to narrow disagreements and find common ground for cooperation.

As the two leaders wrapped up a Florida summit overshadowed by US missile strikes in Syria overnight, Xi joined Trump in stressing the positive mood of the meetings while papering over deep differences that have caused friction between the world's two biggest economies. Trump's aides insisted he had made good on his pledge to raise concerns about China's trade practices and said there was some headway, with Xi agreeing to a 100-day plan for trade talks aimed at boosting US exports and reducing China's trade surplus with the United States.

Speaking after the two-day summit at Trump's Mar-a-Lago resort in Florida, US Secretary of State Rex Tillerson also said that Xi had agreed to increased cooperation in reining in North Korea's missile and nuclear programs though he did not offer any new formula for cracking Pyongyang's defiant attitude.

Tillerson said Trump had accepted Xi's invitation to visit

China and that they also agreed to upgrade a US-China dialogue by putting the two presidents at the head of the

"We have made tremendous progress in our relationship with China," Trump told reporters as the two delegations met around tables flanked by large U.S. and Chinese flags. "We will be making additional progress. The relationship developed by President Xi and myself I think is outstanding.

"And I believe lots of very potentially bad problems will be going away, " he added, without providing details.

Xi also spoke in mostly positive terms.

NEWSIN

10 Taliban gunmen

Pakistani police yesterday killed 10 Taliban gunmen in an early morning shootout in Lahore, officials said, with several militants tied to a February bombing in skirmish. The gunfight escorting five members to an arms cache when they were ambushed by

Venezuela bans top opposition leader years, the latest move in an country. Henrique Capriles was one of the leaders of mass demonstrations this

President Nicolas Maduro police. One protester died.

20 killed in Myanmar wedding boat crash

At least 20 people were killed when a boat carrying scores of wedding guests in Western Myanmar, collided with a river barge authorities said yesterday, with more feared drowned as rescuers searched for 9 missing persons. The boat sank Friday evening in a river near Pathein, a port city west of commercial capital Yangon. It was believed to be carrying around 60 passengers.

AFP, Yangon

that led to clashes with week against socialist increasingly tense power struggle in the crisis-hit group, said police.

AFP, Caracas

Venezuelan

authorities top opposition leader from public office for 15 yesterday banned a the eastern city dying in the erupted as authorities were from the Pakistani Taliban gunmen aiming to free the killed in Lahore

AFP, Lahore

China's official Xinhua news agency said Xi had encouraged the United States to take part in the "One Belt, One Road" plan, Xi's signature foreign policy imitative aimed at infrastructure development across Asia, Africa and Europe, seen in some policy circles as a partial answer to the pivot to Asia strategy of Trump's predecessor Barack Obama.

Chinese state media yesterday cheered the meeting as one that showed the world that confrontation between the two powers was not inevitable and established the tone for the development of US-China relations.

Well wishers place flowers at a makeshift memorial outside a department store in Stockholm yesterday, the day after a hijacked truck plunged into a crowd in a pedestrian shopping area.

РНОТО: AFP

Landslides were also reported in some towns, they said.

Suspect device found in truck ETA ends armed

AFP, Stockholm

Swedish police found a suspect device in the truck that ploughed into a Stockholm crowd killing four in Europe's latest such terror attack, officials said yesterday.

The alleged driver, who is in custody, is a 39-year-old man from Uzbekistan who was already known to Swedish police, authorities said.

"We have found a device in the vehicle that doesn't belong there ... A technical examination is ongoing, we can't go into what it is right now ... whether it's a bomb or a flammable device," police chief Dan Eliasson told reporters.

Intelligence agency chief Anders Thornberg added that the Uzbek suspect "has appeared in our intelligence gathering in the past".

"There is nothing to indicate that we've got the wrong man. On the contrary, the suspicions have strengthened," Eliasson added.

The suspected driver was detained on Friday in Marsta, a suburb north of Stockholm. According to several media outlets, he is an IS supporter.

Intelligence agency Sapo said mean- southern French city of Nice, all of while it was hunting for "possible accomplices or networks that may have been involved in the attack."

Flags flew at half-mast across returned to normal a day after the attack. A stolen beer truck ploughed into a Stockholm yesterday as the city slowly crowd of people at the corner of the bustling Ahlens department store and the Drottninggatan pedestrian street

STOCKHOLM 'TERRORIST ATTACK' Sweden arrests suspected driver of Uzbek nationality on Friday afternoon, above ground from Stockholm's central subway station.

Fifteen people were injured, nine of whom remained in hospital yesterday.

It was the third terror attack in Europe in two weeks, coming on the heels of assaults in London and St Petersburg, although there has been no immediate claim of responsibility.

Previous attacks using vehicles have occurred in London, Berlin and the them claimed by the so-called Islamic State (IS). Prime Minister Stefan Lofven, who said Sweden will hold a minute's silence tomorrow in memory of the victims, has beefed up Sweden's border controls. "Terrorists want us to be afraid, want us to change our behaviour, want that is what we're going to do. So terrorists can never defeat Sweden, never," Lofven said. An attack on Stockholm was just a matter of time, the head of the Centre us to not live our lives normally, but for Asymmetric Threat Studies at the Swedish National Defence College, Magnus Ranstorp, told AFP. "It was pretty expected, the police and intelligence agency have practised for this several times the past year... We just didn't know when it was going to happen," he said.

In 2014, IS called for attacks on citizens of Western countries and gave instructions on how they could be carried out without military equipment, using rocks or knives, or by running people over in vehicles.

Strike kills 15

near Syria's

· AFP, Beirut

: IS-held Raqa

· At least 15 civilians, includ-

· killed in a suspected US-led coalition airstrike yesterday

The Syrian Observatory least 17 people were injured

: ing four children, were near the Islamic State group's Syrian bastion for Human Rights said at in the strike on Heneyda, could rise further because several of the wounded were

The Britain-based group said the strike was suspected the US-led coalition fighting to have been carried out by and that the death toll · in serious conditions.

Raqa, a monitor said.

separatist campaign

3 quakes rock

Hundreds of residents of coastal areas in a province south of the Philippine capital fled to higher ground fearing a tsunami yesterday after a series of earthquakes on the main island of magnitude from 5.0 to 5.9

struck Batangas province, about 90 kms south of Manila, around 3:00pm over a period of about 20 minutes, said the US Geological the Philippine Institute of Volcanology and Seismology, said the event was an "earthquake swarm" in a local faultline but had not been powerful enough there were no reports of casualties, but power was cut off in some areas and cracks had been reported in homes and some commercial buildings.

Batangas officials said to cause a tsunami.

Renato Solidum, head of Three quakes ranging in Philippines

REUTERS, Manila

Luzon.

Survey.

REUTERS, Bayonne

Basque militant group ETA effectively ended an armed separatist campaign after almost half a century yesterday, leading French authorities to the sites where it says its caches of weapons, explosives and ammunition are hidden.

ETA, which killed more than 850 people in its attempt to carve out an independent state in northern Spain and southwest France, declared a ceasefire in 2011 but did not give up its remaining arms. Founded in 1959 out of anger among Basques at political and cultural repression under General Francisco Franco, ETA (Euskadi Ta Askatasuna - Basque Country and Freedom) gained notoriety as one of Europe's most intractable separatist groups.

Yesterday's handover, via intermediaries, of its weapons in the French city of Bayonne will not mean the end of the group as a political entity, but will end an era of political violence in Western Europe.

It comes just as democratically-driven nationalism is stirring across Europe, with Scotland and the Spanish region of Catalonia seeking referendums on independence, while Sinn Fein has urged a vote on taking Northern Ireland out of Britain.

ETA said in a letter to the BBC it had handed over its weapons and explosives to civilian go-betweens who would deliver them to authorities. The mediators - known as "The Artisans of Peace" passed authorities a list with the coordinates for eight sites where ETA had stored its weapons arsenal, their representative, Michel Tubiana, told reporters in Bayonne. The caches contain 120 firearms, about 3 tonnes of explosives and several thousand rounds of ammunition, he said. Security forces were now searching the sites to neutralize the explosives and secure the weapons, French Interior Minister Matthias Fekl said at a news conference in Paris. It is not yet clear if the process will receive the full backing

The Basque parliamentary spokesman for Spain's ruling People's Party, which has refused to negotiate with ETA and called for its full dissolution, said the handover was a final surrender after six years of broken promises.

of the Spanish and French governments.

A government source said Madrid did not believe the group would hand over all its arms, while Spain's state prosecutor has asked the High Court to examine those surrendered Sebastian in 1968 and its last a French policemen shot in 2010.

been weakened in the past decade after hundreds of its members were arrested and weapons seized in joint Spanish and French operations.

IS in Syria and Iraq. as possible murder weapons used in unresolved cases. Heneyda is around 25 ETA's first known victim was a secret police chief in San kilometres (15 miles) west of the city of Raqa, the target It chose not to disarm when it called its truce, but has of a major operation led by a Kurdish-Arab alliance of fighters and backed by the : US-led coalition.

MISSILE STRIKES ON SYRIA AIRBASE

People participate in a demonstration against the recent US strike in Syria, in New York, US, on Friday.

US sends message to N Korea, China

AFP, Seoul

The US missile strike on Syria contained a clear message for North Korea and its main ally China, but not one strong enough to push Pyongyang off its nuclear weapons path, analysts said.

While the timing was largely coincidental, the fact that US President Donald Trump ordered the strike while hosting a summit with Chinese leader Xi Jinping carried particular resonance given that the North's nuclear ambitions - and how best to thwart them - was among the top agenda items of their meeting.

And exercising the military option added some extra weight to Trump's recent threat of unilateral action against Pyongyang if Beijing fails to help curb its neighbour's nuclear weapons programme. Kim Yong-Hyun, a professor at Dongguk University said the strike against Syria was a statement of intent that was meant for a wide readership.

"It signals to Pyongyang that the US has a new sheriff in town who isn't hesitant about pulling his gun from the holster," Kim said.

But while the move might give the North pause, it is unlikely to deter a leadership that views nuclear weapons as the sole guarantee of its future sur-

"In the long term, US military actions overseas won't help curb the North's nuclear pursuit", Kim said.

The North has carried out five nuclear tests -- two of them last year -and expert satellite imagery analysis suggests it could well be preparing for a sixth.

And Pyongyang has shown no sign of reining in a missile testing programme ultimately aimed at securing the capability to deliver a nuclear warhead to the continental United States.

impact the US president's willingness to exercise his military muscle may have on China's thinking.

China is North Korea's economic

The question then arises as to what of the Xi-Trump summit, it gave little mentaries.

went strong on photos and coverage

University, said the North's nuclear arsenal and highly sensitive geopolitical position meant the fallout of any military action could be catastrophic. "A small kick could provoke big Although China's state media disasters. It's not like Iraq," Jia said.

lifeline and as such enjoys more leverage over its maverick neighbour than While China has clearly lost patience with Pyongyang's nuclear provocations, it is extremely wary of any response that might bring about North Korea's collapse and chaos on

"From the Chinese point of view, there is still room to explore a path for Jia Qingguo, a professor of International Relations at Beijing a diplomatic solution", Wang said.

any other country.

its doorstep.

space to news of the strikes against proud." Syria, with few editorials or com-

After fierce battle, Gorsuch confirmed to US top court

AFP, Washington

The US Senate confirmed Neil Gorsuch to the Supreme Court Friday, culminating a 13-month fight over the vacancy and rewarding President Donald Trump by bringing a conservative tilt back to the bench.

The federal judge from Colorado crossed the finish line in a 54-45 vote, one day after Trump's Republicans controversially changed Senate rules to circumvent a Democratic blockade of his nomination.

"Today is a new day," Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell said ahead of the vote, seeking to put a positive stamp on what has been a contentious congressional process for the new Republican administra-

Gorsuch is "going to make an incredible that halts entry to the United States from addition to the court," McConnell said. "He's going to make the American people nations.

sworn in by Chief Justice John Roberts on Monday at 9:00am in a private ceremony. The 49-year-old judge has been hailed by Republicans as a worthy successor to towering conservative justice Antonia Scalia, who died in February 2016 as the presidential race was gaining steam.

The nine-justice court has had one seat vacant for more than a year amid the ensuing political battle, with Democrats and Republicans trading bitter accusations of blame. The Supreme Court is the final arbiter of many of the most sensitive issues of American life and law.

Its members are appointed for life, so their influence is long-lasting. Gorsuch's confirmation is destined to shape the bench just as Trump is seeking approval of a key plank of his political platform: his executive order citizens of several Muslim-majority

The so-called travel ban has been halted The White House said Gorsuch -- the in lower federal courts, but experts expect it youngest nominee in a generation -- will be will make its way to the Supreme Court.

Trump presses Xi Hails 'tremendous progress'; Chinese state media says confrontation not inevitable REUTERS, Palm Beach President Donald Trump pressed Chinese President Xi