The Shooting of Chaalbaaz is stopped!

Shakib Khan was recently in London for the shooting of his next Indo-Bangla joint production film, Chaalbaaz. However, once they reached London, since the film didn't meet some criteria that needs to be followed for the making of every joint production film, the Cine Technician And Workers Of Eastern India didn't allow the shooting to take place. The Federation has claimed that the production house has started to make the film without actually getting the permission from them. The President has also said that unless they employ further 19 technicians from India, the production house will not be allowed to start shooting. Currently, the future of this film is quite uncertain. However, the question arises that if the Indian Federation can be so strict about following the rules and regulations set by the government, why can't the same happen for Bangladesh? Bangladesh is overlooking a lot of the rules that are being broken by the films that are being jointly produced. When will the actors and filmmakers realize that this is only hampering our film industry?
