Tama Mirza on NODIJON

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Film star Tama Mirza became the focus of attention after her role in "Ek Mon Ek Praan", helmed by Shohanoor Rahman Shohan. Her popularity gained steam after her appearances in a number of subsequent films, before she went on to win the National Film Award for her part in "Nodijon". In a recent conversation with The Daily Star, the actress talks about the film and the success that followed.

"This is one of those instances where awards are not the sole purpose of striving in cinema. To be able to act in 'Nodijon' itself has brought me to the peak of my career. I knew this film was going to great heights while working on the set, and my predictions have been spot on."

"Initially, I had some reservations about taking up the venture. The narrative is set in a village, and I was used to playing only glamorous roles. The director, Shahnewaz Kakoly, with whom I was well acquainted, invited me over to her house several times to discuss the plot, and I was soon enamoured by the story."

"In the narrative, I play a character named Chhaya, who is from a poor family, and always donned in tattered clothes. To prepare for the part, I had to immerse myself in Chhaya's surroundings, and live out a few days in hardship. The journey that brought us to the completion of 'Nodijon' is a story in itself."

"I am not a schooled actor, but for 'Nodijon' I have had to train intensely which was a priceless experience. I don't know if such opportunities will come by again, but if they don't, I have no regrets; I am happy with 'Nodijon' being a once in a lifetime opportunity."

"After winning the award, many well-wishers from the industry and beyond came forward to congratulate me. I am overwhelmed, and grateful for their compliments. Their appreciation is proof that I have done good work. It is every actor's dream to win the National Film Award, and 'Nodijon' has fulfilled mine."

Sitarist Niladri Kumar to perform in Dhaka

Blues Communications organising "A Voyage of Strings"

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Eclectic sitar player Niladri Kumar, who has made a name for himself in Indian fusion and film music, is all set to perform in Dhaka later this month. The concert, titled "A Voyage of String", is being organised by Blues Communications and will take place on July 21 at the Bangabandhu International Conference Centre. Tabla player Vijay Ghate will accompany Niladri at the concert.

Niladri Kumar is best known as a fusion artiste for his amazing skills of combining classical notes or rhythms with the new age taste of music. One of Niladri's specialties lie in the zitar – a modified version of the sitar with reduced number of frets, 5 strings instead of 20, and an added electric pickup. The unique instrument that fuses the guitar and sitar, has allowed him to sway from classical genres to even rock, electronic, and lounge genres. The multi-award winning musician has worked and performed in collaboration with notable musicians including Ustad Zakir Hussain, John McLaughlin, AR Rahman, Shankar-Ehsaan-Loy and many more.

Details of tickets for the show will be available soon on the Facebook Page of Blues Communications.

In a revealing new interview with SiriusXM radio, Kesha credited a strict recording routine with helping her cope with depression. "I wrote a song about it, so let's talk about it," she said. "I think it's healthy to talk about feeling really down sometimes because life can be a f---- b---- sometimes. And I think the beautiful part is that you hold onto hope ... and you keep showing up for yourself."

Kesha acknowledged that while her fans are rooting a comeback hit with "Rainbow" – her first album since 2012's "Warrior" – she's risen above commercial pressure.

"I felt the pressure writing the music," she said. "I knew in my brain what I going through the past four years. "It makes me want to cry because it feels really surreal," she said of announcing the LP.

The singer also confronted her depression in the music video for her new single, "Praying". In a sobering monologue, she asked, "Am I dead, or is this one of those dreams, those horrible dreams that seem like they last forever?" She admitted to SiriusXM that while she's contemplated suicide, it shouldn't wanted it to sound like and look like and everything ... Now we've done the art and the photo shoot and all the songs and the masters and mixes, and I played on this and wrote a bunch of songs all by myself. The whole thing was this brainchild of mine that I worked on for however many years, and now that it's done I can't care."
