NIDHHI AGERWAL passed four rounds of audition for MUNNA MICHAEL

Though Nidhi Agerwal has always wanted to be an actress, she never expected her dream to be fulfilled. Nidhi, who makes her Bollywood debut opposite Tiger Shroff in "Munna Michael", told Times of India: "That goal seemed impossible, considering that I come from a non-film background. I didn't know how to pursue my dream. However, the people around me would always say, 'You have a Bollywood face'."

Eventually, she started modeling. It was only when she was offered a Kannada film did she realize that Bollywood could be possible as well. Her next stop was Mumbai where she started attending auditions.

"I went through four rounds of auditions before I landed 'Munna Michael'," revealed Nidhi, adding: "I used to hate it when people would say, 'Oh, you are going to Mumbai to try and make a mark in the Hindi film industry'. Isn't everyone trying to make a mark in their chosen field?"

Rtv and Dabur Vatika recently crowned the winners of "Campus Star", a pageant for students of 15 private and public universities in singing, dancing and acting. High-ups of Dabur and Rtv are seen with the winners of the show, at the capital's Bengal Multimedia Studio.

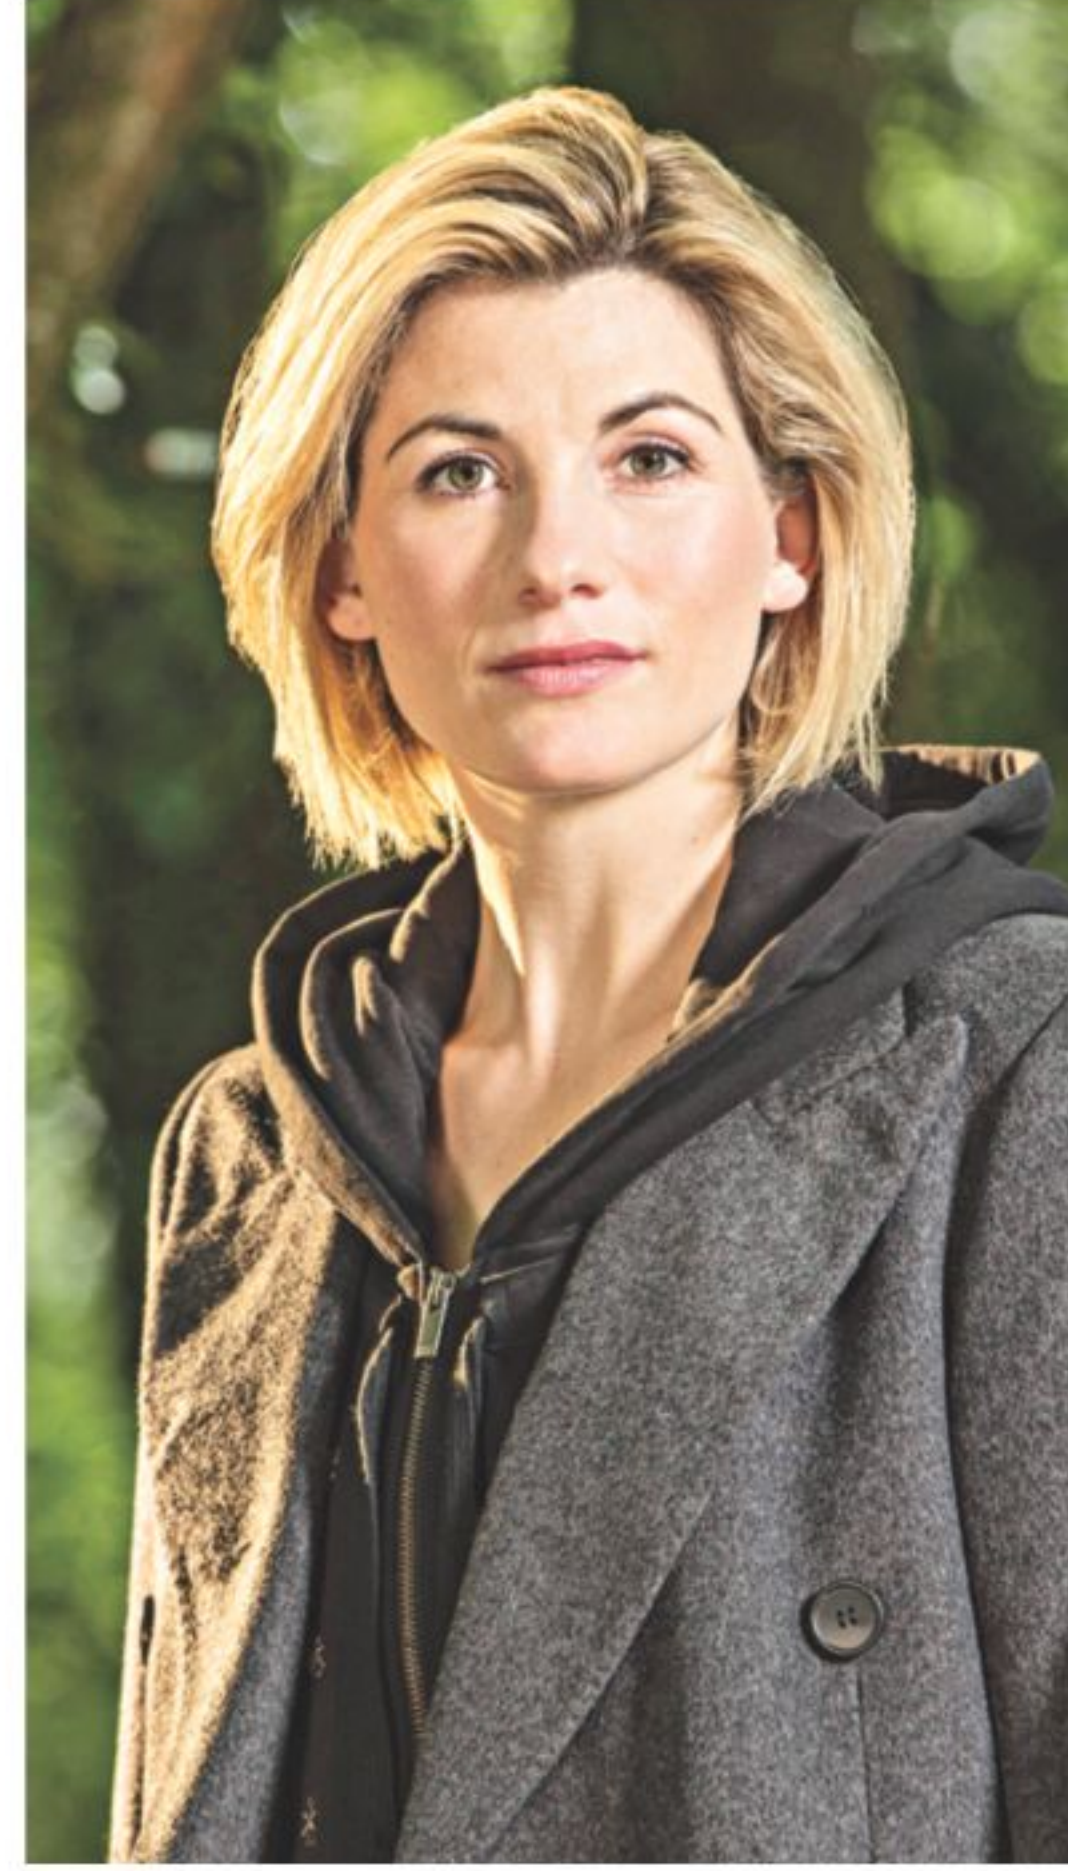

Jodie Whittaker named the first woman lead in Doctor Who

Jodie Whittaker will be the 13th Doctor in "Doctor Who" and the first woman in the role after the BBC named her Sunday as the new time lord, one of the world's most iconic sci-fi characters on television.

"Attack the Block" and "Broadchurch" star Whittaker will be seen on BBC One in the UK and on BBC America in the US, as well as globally, with the long-running sci-fi series still one of BBC Worldwide's biggest-selling shows internationally.

"I'm beyond excited to begin this epic journey, with Chris and with every Whovian on this planet," Whittaker said. "It's more than an honor to play the Doctor. It means remembering everyone I used to be, while stepping forward to embrace everything the Doctor stands for: hope. I can't wait."

The new Doctor was revealed in an interstitial after the climax of the Wimbledon men's tennis finals on BBC One and on the official "Doctor Who" Twitter feed. The Doctor has taken female form before, as 'Missy' (Michelle Gomez), and was very briefly played by Joanna Lumley as part of a series of regenerations in a single episode, but Whittaker will be the first Doctor to be played by a woman for a whole series.

She replaces Peter Capaldi who became the 12th doctor in 2013 and who told BBC radio in January that it was "time to move on." Capaldi replaced Matt Smith, who went on to star in "The Crown".

"Doctor Who" was first made in 1963, but its current incarnation dates back to a 2005 reboot with Christopher Eccleston in the title role. He was succeeded by David Tennant.

Writers and showrunners at the helm since the reboot have included Russell T Davies and Steven Moffat, who teamed with another "Doctor Who" writer, Mark Gatiss, on another fan favorite, "Sherlock".

The final episode of the Moffat and Capaldi era is a special scheduled for Christmas Day. Chris Chibnall of "Broadchurch" has already been named the new "Doctor Who" showrunner. His first season next year will be the 11th of the new generation of the show.

The producers had teased fans on Friday with a video on YouTube, which featured 10 Downing Street and the Statue of Liberty, before revealing a message: "Meet the 13th Doctor after the Wimbledon Men's Final."

Queen biopic officially happening

The long-in-the-works Queen biopic is "finally happening," according to a new post on the iconic rock band's official website.

The project has been around in some form or another for over 10 years now and late last year, after first Sacha Baron Cohen and then Ben Whishaw departed the film due to creative differences, "Mr. Robot" star Rami Malek was cast as Freddie Mercury.

According to Queen's Roger Taylor and Brian May, who are serving as executive music producers, "Rami has great presence and he's utterly dedicated to the project. He's completely living and breathing Freddie already, which is wonderful."

Bryan Singer is directing, and the film is "as-close-as-that" to the start of shooting, with pre-production beginning next week to prepare for principal photography in London as soon as mid-September.
